MODIFY DEMANDS, CRAIG TELLS VALERA

ULSTER DELEGATES LEAVE; MAY RENEW PARLEY NEXT WEEK

CRAIG REITERATES ULSTER PLEA FOR SELF-DETERMINATION; ASK MODIFICATION OF SINN FEIN DEMANDS.

(By Associated Press)

Belfast, Ireland, July 18.—The return to Belfast of Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, and the members of his cabinet, who have been with him in London in connection with the Irish peace move, must not be taken as a rupture of negotiations, it was decalred by Col. Spencer, secretary of the delegation, on its arrival here. It is thought that the delegation will be recalled to London next week.

None of the cabinet members had anything to say for publication.

It was stated today that no discussions on the points concerning a settlement will be possible until Eamonn deValera considerably modifies his points.

When Sir James Craig saw the republican leader in Dublin before the recent Irish parliament election the Ulster premier is declared i- unionist headquarters to have had a long discussion on the Irish republic with the leader. Unionists here express the belief that deValera had expressed himself similarly in his interviews with Premier Lloyd George

Ulster Want Self-Determination

London, July 18.—The Irish negotiations have taken an unexpected development late tonight, Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, on leaving for Belfast made an important statement which appears to forbid any hope of assembling a conference such as Premier Lloyd George proposed between himself, Mr. deValera and the Ulster premier.

The Ulster leader maintains that the Sinn Feiners themselves by contesting the elections for the northern parliament on a platform of "no partition," in which they were roundly defeated, have recognized Ulster's claim to self determination, and, so far as his words have been interpreted for the present, he seems to wash his hands of any further participation in the peace negotiations.

Ulster Premier's Statement.

Sir James said: "I return home well satisfied with the efforts being made towards peace. Mr. de Valera has broken his silence and cleared the ground by his statment to the press that he proposes to found his claim on recognition of the right of self-determination."

The Ulster premier contended that the people of northern Ireland in the recent elections "determined" their own parliament by an overwhelming majority and that Mr. de Valera and his friends admitted the right of such self-determination on the part of northern Ireland by the fact that they themselves stood as candidates for the northern parliament and submitted their policy of "no partition." This, in fact, was the only issue placed before the electorate, said Sir James, and "no partition" was rejected by the largest majority ever secured in any general election.

U. S. DEATHS DROP 23 PERCENT IN 6 MONTHS

New York—North America's health record for 1921 bids fair to be the best in many years, says the Metropolitan Life Insurance company whose records for the first six months of 1921 show mortality rates the lowest in the company's history.

A marked decline in deaths from pneumonia, influenza, tuberculosis and organic heart trouble is claimed. Deaths from all causes show a decrease of 23 per cent over the same period in 1920.

"Deaths from influenza," the statement says, "are only one-ninth of what they were for the first half of 1920. Likewise pneumonia mortality for the first half of 1921 was about one-third that for the corresponding period of last year."

"When I Grow Up"

Nyal Forstner, age six, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Forstner, Third street north, says: "I want to be a big engineer on the Green Bay & Western Railroad because then I can go as fast as I want to and the policemen can't stop me."

KELLNER FARMERS HAVE BIG MEETING

A meeting of the Kellner Soy Bean and Potato Growers' Association was held at Kellner last night. A large share of its membership of seventy farmers was present. The program consisted of several educational addresses and a number of vocal offerings. R. A. Peterson, county agent gave a talk on Light Soils, explaining the results of a series of soil experiments at the Hancock experiment station, conducted last week. E. H. Perkins discussed the subject "Farm Conditions Today." Duets by Mr. Peterson and Mr. Perkins, and solos by Miss Ackerman, Kellner, pleased the audience.

Plans for a demonstration trip and a booster picnic to be held at Kellner on August 24, were made at the meeting last night.

BARBERS SEE NO CHANCE FOR CUT

SHORTAGE OF BARBERS AND NO DECLINE IN COST OF MATERIALS WILL KEEP PRICES UP FOR SOMETIME, SAY LOCAL BARBERS

Little possibility for a reduction soon in the price of hair cuts and shaves is held out by Wisconsin Rapids barbers, who were interviewed by a Tribune representative when it was discovered that barbers in Rockford, Ill., had brought about a reduction and that prices now prevailing in that city are 35 cents for a haircut and 20 cents for a shave. Several of the barbers carried clippings from newspapers which showed that the cut in Rockford was due to a barber's war and not from a reduction in the cost of materials.

Shortage of Barbers

A Forstner, proprietor of the four chair shop on Second street, states that the prices of barber materials are remaining high and that in some instances a slight increase has taken effect during the past two months. "I purchased two chairs during the time when the old scale wages were in effect and lately purchased another and found that the price had almost trebled," he stated.

Tonics, salves, soaps, razors, electric power and every other item has been increased since before the present scale went into effect and as yet no reduction has been made in the barber's favor, was the statement of another local barber.

"There is a shortage of 1,800 barbers in the state and with only about 100 taken the state examination there is little possibility that this situation will be rectified and as long as the shortage exists the wages of the employed barbers will be high," stated a west side barber.

Many Razors Sold

Hardware dealers here say that the sale of safety razors has trebled within the last two years and lay it to the increased barber prices and the fact that many men shaved themselves while in the army and found that it was a great deal cheaper. Hair clippers are also finding a ready market with the heads of large families clipping the hair of their youngsters rather than pay 50 cents a head to have the barber do the work.

He had shot himself through the head, dying instantly.

Loads of beans will start coming in by the end of the week probably, according to Mr. Rourke, an officer of the company, and canning will commence immediately. No difficulty is anticipated by the corporation's officials in finding employees. When the canning season is at its height, the company expects to employ about 150 people, many of them boys and girls who are able to do the lighter work of sorting and picking. Applications for jobs already received indicate that a full crew will be easily recruited.

STATE ISSUES 2000 LIQUOR SALES PERMITS

Madison, Wis.—Permits are now being issued through the state prohibition commission to over 2,000 Wisconsin physicians and druggists to lawfully handle intoxicating liquors. Each application for permit received by the commissioner is accompanied with written approval of the district attorney, according to the regulation of the new law.

Lists for the state enforcement officers were furnished by the federal officials, permitting the checking up of all those who should be licensed to handle liquor. Any doctor or druggist selling intoxicating liquors without permit is subject to arrest and punishment for violation of the state law.

OLD BRIDGE'S FATE UP TO COMMITTEE

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE APPOINTS BODY TO CONSIDER PROBLEM OF REMOVAL AND RELOCATION; SEVERAL USES SUGGESTED.

A committee, consisting of G. W. Mead, chairman, Tom Udegard, L. A. DeGuere, F. F. Mengel, E. H. Aldrich and G. D. Fritzsinger, has been appointed by the Chamber of Commerce, through its president, C. A. Normington, to consider the advisability of utilizing the Grand avenue bridge after its replacement. Although work on the new bridge begins next month, the old structure will remain until next spring.

Disposition of the old bridge is still much of a conjecture and a number of problems will have to be considered in deciding on its future utility. The committee will investigate fully the expense of taking it down, its possible utility in other locations, and the problem of relocating it.

Span River At Island, Plan.

Various suggestions have been made as to the future use of the bridge. One proposal advocates its use to connect the mainland and one of the city's islands south of the Northwestern railroad bridge, using the island as a park site. Another possibility which will be considered by the committee is the spanning of the river at the Consolidated island, known as Long Island. Advocates of this plan contend that it would be possible to use one span for the east and another for the west channel and that the middle channel could be spanned by a wooden bridge. This would serve a double purpose in that it would permit the use of the islands for park purposes and would give the city a crossing-point at an advantageous place.

The recommendations of the committee will be filed with the common council for approval.

IOONSHINE EXPLODES; VICTIMS IN HOSPITAL

(By Associated Press)

Frank Tuzapitin, one of the proprietors of the place is at the hospital suffering from severe burns sustained when the fiery liquid showered about his arms and over his body.

Matt Tilla, said to be a bar tender in another saloon is the other victim at the hospital. It is believed he inhaled some of the gasses from the explosion of the can.

Damage to the parlor is approximately $400.

H. C. L. DROP BOOMS MARRIAGE MARKET

REDUCED COST OF LIVING REFLECTED IN INCREASED NUMBER OF WEDDINGS; TWO GROOMS OVER 80, 106 BRIDES OVER 60

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin marriages established a new record during 1920 when 22,293 couples were united in the state, figures compiled by the state board of health show. The nearest approach to the 1920 level was in 19133 with 21,052, while the increase over 1919 was 3,340.

The war and lowered cost of living are given as the causes of the large increase in number of marriages. More than 100,000 young men of marriageable age went out of the state in 1918, the board says, most of whom returned adding largely increased lists of marriages in 1919 and 1920.

State figures for 1920 show one bride was under 15 years of age; 4,780 were between 15 and 19, with by far the greater number 9,845 between the ages of 20 and 24. It is shown that 4,434 women married between the ages of 25 and 29; 1,406 between 30 and 34; 683 between 35 and 39, 350 between 40 and 44; 277 between 45 and 49; 147 between 50 and 54; 100 between 56 and 60 and 106 between 60 and 79.

Two Grooms Over 80

Two grooms were reported as over 80 with Waupaca county reporting marriages of 10 brides and 14 grooms over 70 years of age. They were at the Wisconsin veteran's home.

The tables also show that 1,537 grooms and 1,341 brides were widowed and 698 grooms and 829 brides were divorced. In 18,500 marriages both parties were native born, and in 1,319 both parties were foreign born. Of the grooms 19,195 were native born and 3,051 were foreign born while of the brides 20,246 were native born and 2,000 foreign born. In 47 other marriages the nativity of the parties were reported as unknown.

New York—A clap of thunder is believed by physicians to have revived shell shock symptoms in Lieut. George Hamon, Ardmore, Okla., who is being treated in a hospital.

Lieut. Hamon was found wandering in Weehawken, N. J., a victim of aphasia. A letter in his pocket, addressed to a relative, said physicians had warned him that a sudden noise might bring about a recurrence of his ailment contracted in France.

THREE WITNESSES OPEN ATTACK ON 'BLACK WHITE SOX'

INDICTED PLAYERS "JOSH" PROSECUTORS AS TRIAL PROCEEDS; QUESTION OF CONTRACTS UNDER FIRE.

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, July 20.—Bill Burns, former major league pitcher, took the stand in the trial of the indicted players today, to tell his own story of the alleged conspiracy to throw the 1919 world series. Burns was indicted as one of the conspirators but agreed to turn state's evidence.

Say Men Under Contract

William "Kid" Gleason and Harry Grabiner, manager and secretary respectively, of the Chicago White Sox, testified for the state today in the baseball trial, telling of the contracts between the indicted players and the club. Their testimony was designed to prove the prosecution's contention that the men were under contract to the club during the world series and not just in the regular season, as the defense contends.

Both men stated that the players were under contract in the series and a cross examination by the defense failed to shake their testimony. They could not, however, give specific points in the contract.

Players "Josh" Prosecutors

While the two club officials were testifying, the indicted men kept talking to each other in an undertone. "There's a double." "He made that one on the even." Happy Felsch whispered, "He lost that one in the sun." "He lost it nothing," said Joe Jackson, "He just bobbed it."

SUGGEST NEW SCHEME TO PAY SOLDIER BONUS

Washington, D. C.—Fearing group action against them because President Harding's attitude on the bonus bill, politicians are now seeking a way out to satisfy the former service men and the president as well.

The compromise suggested by these politicians is that the interest obtained from the $10,000,000,000 of foreign loans shall be placed aside and devoted to bonus payments. There are a great many members of congress who look upon such a compromise favorably although they say that it is questionable whether this will satisfy those seeking government aid. They point out that the foreign countries are not paying any interest now and there is no evidence that any will be forthcoming for many years.

WHEAT DROPS AFTER FIRST CROP MOVEMENT

Minneapolis—Sales from the country, at the beginning of the movement of the Northwest wheat crop, was a factor in a 9-cent drop in the quotation for July wheat today. Opening at $1.39 the July option sank to $1.30 at noon.

Early, harveting reports from North Dakota indicated that there has been some reduction in the yield on account of rust and blight, although the reports indicate that with the wheat ripening early, there is slight likelihood of further damage to the crops.

WHIZZBANGS BOW DOWN TO WEST SIDE TIGERS

The West Side Tigers defeated the Whizz Bangs at the Lincoln High school baseball field Sunday afternoon by the score of 6 to 5. The game was hard fought until the last man was out and was one of the best exhibitions of amateur baseball that has been played in this city for sometime. The Whizzbangs started out strong and pushed over a couple of markers in the first inning and another in the second but after that Nobles had them eating out of the hollow of his hand. Next Sunday the Tigers play the Nekoosa team at the South Side ball park.

STATE ISSUES 2000 LIQUOR SALES PERMITS

Madison, Wis.—Permits are now being issued through the state prohibition commission to over 2,000 Wisconsin physicians and druggists to lawfully handle intoxicating liquors. Each application for permit received by the commissioner is accompanied with written approval of the district attorney, according to the regulation of the new law.

Lists for the state enforcement officers were furnished by the federal officials, permitting the checking up of all those who should be licensed to handle liquor. Any doctor or druggist selling intoxicating liquors without permit is subject to arrest and punishment for violation of the state law.

Eleven deputy commissioners are now actively at work in Wisconsin. They are reported from the Madison office to have had notable success in cleaning out moonshiners in several sections of the state.

OLD BRIDGE'S FATE UP TO COMMITTEE

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE APPOINTS BODY TO CONSIDER PROBLEM OF REMOVAL AND RELOCATION; SEVERAL USES SUGGESTED.

A committee, consisting of G. W. Mead, chairman, Tom Udegard, L. A. DeGuere, F. F. Mengel, E. H. Aldrich and G. D. Fritzsinger, has been appointed by the Chamber of Commerce, through its president, C. A. Normington, to consider the advisability of utilizing the Grand avenue bridge after its replacement. Although work on the new bridge begins next month, the old structure will remain until next spring.

Disposition of the old bridge is still much of a conjecture and a number of problems will have to be considered in deciding on its future utility. The committee will investigate fully the expense of taking it down, its possible utility in other locations, and the problem of relocating it.

Span River At Island, Plan

Various suggestions have been made as to the future use of the bridge. One proposal advocates its use to connect the mainland and one of the city's islands south of the Northwestern railroad bridge, using the island as a park site. Another possibility which will be considered by the committee is the spanning of the river at the Consolidated island, known as Long Island. Advocates of this plan contend that it would be possible to use one span for the east and another for the west channel and that the middle channel could be spanned by a wooden bridge. This would serve a double purpose in that it would permit the use of the islands for park purposes and would give the city a crossing-point at an advantageous place.

The recommendations of the committee will be filed with the common council for approval.

SPECIAL TRAIN TO CARRY GUARDSMEN TO CAMP DOUGLAS

BATTERY E TO LEAVE HERE MONDAY; ELEVEN RECRUITS HAVE ENLISTED DURING THE PAST WEEK

Members of Battery E are busily engaged preparing for the period of encampment at Camp Douglas, which commences for the Artillery units next Monday. As the time of encampment draws near many old service men are reenlisting and at present the battery has an enrollment of 79 men.

It is expected that Battery E will leave here next Monday morning on a special train bearing the Stevens Point battery and other batteries from the northern sections of the state. Supply Sergeant Kleberg is burning up past speed records in issuing clothing to the men and at present has practically all members ready for the two weeks encampment.

Good Drill Attendance

The drill Monday evening was the best that the local unit has participated in and the largest attendance was reported. The call of the army life has been instrumental in securing 11 recruits for the battery. Walter Sullivan, Martin Herron, Harlow Merrill, Frank Prusynski, John O'Day, George Fahrner Jr., Adolph Zanow, Emery Dolan, Albert Dolan Warren Sullivan and William Golgonski, are the men that enlisted during the past week.

Camp Douglas Is Improved

Captains Kruske and Herschleb left this afternoon for Camp Douglas where they will obtain orders for the moving of the battery and also exchange some clothing that cannot be used by members of the battery. Local people who have been at the camp this summer say that it is considerably improved since previous encampments, and that the camp is one of the best any National Guard unit in the United States will have a chance to train in.

A considerable proportion of each class fails to get by the test with a satisfactory grade.

MOONSHINE EXPLODES; VICTIMS IN HOSPITAL

(By Associated Press)

Racine, July 20—Two fatalities probably will result from the explosion of what is said to have been a five gallon can of moonshine, last night in an apartment above a down town soft drink parlor.

Frank Tuzapitin, one of the proprietors of the place is at the hospital suffering from severe burns sustained when the fiery liquid showered about his arms and over his body.

Matt Tilla, said to be a bar tender in another saloon is the other victim at the hospital. It is believed he inhaled some of the gasses from the explosion of the can.

Tilla told police that a bottle was being filled from the can in a dark room. They wanted to see how full the bottle was when a man lit a match, the explosion occurred.

Damage to the parlor is approximately $400.

PITTSVILLE MAN GETS STIFF FINE AND COSTS

Duke Arntz, Pittsville, who was arrested on complaint of Al. Smith for indecent exposure of the person was found guilty Monday afternoon by six local jurors and was given a fine and costs amounting to $76.08 by Judge Getts. District Attorney Frank Calkins appeared for the state.

The case was the result of the defendant in swimming on June 17 in the Yellow river without the formality of wearing a bathing suit. Several Pittsville young ladies were in swimming at the time and left the place when Arntz appeared. Al. Smith, a father of one of the girls, was told of the incident and made the complaint against Arntz.

H. C. L. DROP BOOMS MARRIAGE MARKET

REDUCED COST OF LIVING REFLECTED IN INCREASED NUMBER OF WEDDINGS; TWO GROOMS OVER 80, 106 BRIDES OVER 60

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin marriages established a new record during 1920 when 22,293 couples were united in the state, figures compiled by the state board of health show. The nearest approach to the 1920 level was in 19133 with 21,052, while the increase over 1919 was 3,340.

The war and lowered cost of living are given as the causes of the large increase in number of marriages. More than 100,000 young men of marriageable age went out of the state in 1918, the board says, most of whom returned adding largely increased lists of marriages in 1919 and 1920.

State figures for 1920 show one bride was under 15 years of age; 4,780 were between 15 and 19, with by far the greater number 9,845 between the ages of 20 and 24. It is shown that 4,434 women married between the ages of 25 and 29; 1,406 between 30 and 34; 683 between 35 and 39, 390 between 40 and 44; 277 between 45 and 49; 147 between 50 and 54; 100 between 56 and 60 and 106 between 50 and 79.

Two Grooms Over 80

Two grooms were reported as over 80 with Waupaca county reporting marriages of 10 brides and 14 grooms over 70 years of age. They were at the Wisconsin veteran's home.

The tables also show that 1,537 grooms and 1,341 brides were widowed and 698 grooms and 829 brides were divorced. In 18,500 marriages both parties were native born, an in 1,313 both parties were foreign born. Of the grooms 19,195 were native born, and 3,051 were foreign born while of the brides 20,246 were native born and 2,000 foreign born. In 47 other marriages the nativity of the parties were reported as unknown.

New York—A clap of thunder is believed by physicians to have received shell shock symptoms in Lieut. George Hamon, Ardmore, Okla, who is being treated in a hospital.

Lieut. Hamon was found wandering in Weehawken, N. J., a victim of aphasia. A letter in his pocket, addressed to a relative, said physicians had warned him that a sudden noise might bring about a recurrence of his ailment contracted in France.

Lieut. Hamon is a nephew of Jake L. Hamon, Republican national committeeman for Oklahoma, slain by Clara Smith Hamon.

THREE WITNESSES OPEN ATTACK ON 'BLACK WHITE SOX'

INDICTED PLAYERS "JOSH" PROSECUTORS AS TRIAL PROCEEDS; QUESTION OF CONTRACTS UNDER FIRE.

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, July 20.—Bill Burns, former major league pitcher, took the stand in the trial of the indicted players today, to tell his own story of the alleged conspiracy to throw the 1919 world series. Burns was indicted as one of the conspirators but agreed to turn state's evidence.

Say Men Under Contract

William "Kid" Gleason and Harry Grabiner, manager and secretary respectively, of the Chicago White Sox, testified for the state today in the baseball trial, telling of the contracts between the indicted players and the club. Their testimony was designed to prove the prosecution's contention that the men were under contract to the club during the world series and not just in the regular season, as the defense contends.

Both men stated that the players were under contract in the series and a cross examination by the defense failed to shake their testimony. They could not, however, give specific points in the contract.

Players "Josh" Prosecutors

While the two club officials were testifying, the indicted men kept talking to each other in an undertone, "There's a double." "He made that one on the even." Happy Felsch whispered. "He lost that one in the sun." "He lost it nothing," said Joe Jackson, "He just booted it."

SUGGEST NEW SCHEME TO PAY SOLDIER BONUS

Washington, D. C.—Fearing group action against them because President Harding's attitude on the bonus bill, politicians are now seeking a way out to satisfy the former service men and the president as well.

The compromise suggested by these politicians is that the interest obtained from the $10,000,000,000 of foreign loans shall be placed aside and devoted to bonus payments. There are a great many members of congress who look upon such a compromise favorably although they say that it is questionable whether this will satisfy those seeking government aid. They point out that the foreign countries are not paying any interest now and there is no evidence that any will be forthcoming for many years.

WHEAT DROPS AFTER FIRST CROP MOVEMENT

Minneapolis—Sales from the country, at the beginning of the movement of the Northwest wheat crop, was a factor in a 9-cent drop in the quotation for July wheat today. Opening at $1.39 the July option sank to $1.30 at noon.

Early, harveting reports from North Dakota indicated that there has been some reduction in the yield on account of rust and blight, although the reports indicate that, with the wheat ripening early, there is slight likelihood of further damage to the crops.

HENRY AND THE NITRATE PLANT.

Henry Ford wants to buy the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant in Alabama from Uncle Sam. He offers to pay $5,000,000 down and $1,500,000 a year for a period of a hundred years. He also wants to purchase two dams for the electric power they will yield to run the plant. He will be content, he says, with a profit of 8 per cent on the investment. His purpose is to manufacture fertilizer as a private enterprise, but if there should be another war in which this country is engaged he would put the plant at the disposal of the government for war purposes.

Only those conversant with all the facts are able to pass competent judgment on the merits of the offer, but without knowing these facts the people of this country, common and uncommon, must be agreed that Henry would be more nearly in his natural element as a maker of fertilizer than as the angel of peace, argosy or as a member of "the greatest deliberative body in the world," the United States Senate.

The world is not overburdened with fertilized. If Henry Ford can furnish a soil-quickener cheap enough to put those superannuated New England farms again on the agricultural map, and make two blades grow where only one now grows on fields of more tender years, he will be worth more to the country than all the near-statesmen put together. Under those circumstances he will be forgiven any lack of knowledge of history that he may further confess to. On with the nitrate dance if the fiddler in Washington is adequately requitted.

MANY MISSING IN G. A. R. CONVENTION TO BE HELD SOON

10,000 MEMBERS HAVE PASSED AWAY SINCE LAST CONVENTION; OHIO LEADS IN NUMBER OF "VETS" LEFT.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 16.—When the Grand Army of the Republic holds its annual reunion this year, more than 10,000 of the Civil War veterans who attended the encampment of 1920 will be counted among the missing as the ranks have been depleted to this extent through the last year.

The total membership of the G. A. R. today is 93,255 while its membership in 1920 was 103,258.

The total membership is scattered among 4415 posts in every state. Ohio, with 10,241, has the largest membership, with Pennsylvania second with 9,122; New York, third, 8,795; Illinois fourth, 6,868; Indiana fifth, 5,649; Massachusetts, sixth, 5,356. No other states have 5,000 or more members.

Property owned by all posts is valued at $2,075,027, including real estate worth $802,841.

Members in the old confederate states total approximately 2200.

Organized in Illinois.

The G. A. R. was organized in Illinois in the spring of 1866. Who its originators were is a matter of tradition rather than record, says the report made to the national encampment in 1869 by N. P. Chipman, then adjutant general of the national organization.

"There can be no doubt that the late Colonel B. F. Stephenson of Decatur, Ill., was one of the prime movers," says Chipman's report. "Being recognized as such, he organized the first post at Dakota, Ill."

By July, 1866, there were 40 posts in Illinois, representatives of which met in convention and organized the state department. Stephenson was by common consent the provisional commander-in-chief, and posts were organized in other states, resulting in the first national encampment being held at Indianapolis, Nov. 20, 1866. After the Indianapolis convention, Chipman records that "posts seem to have sprung up as if by magic in all parts of the north," but he adds there was NO records of progress. Ten states were represented at the Indianapolis convention, 21 states in 1867; 24 states in 1868; 37 states in 1869, having 2050 posts.

1880—240,000 Members.

At the 1869 encampment a mutual life insurance scheme was proposed, it being said that the state departments "claimed to represent a constituency of over 240,000." But there is NO authentic record of the number for the early years, the insurance proposal containing an estimate, it is thought, and the '67 estimate being regarded as the number of union soldiers living in the jurisdiction of the state departments represented at the convention. For instance, the adjutant general's report at the 1870 encampment, when there were 39 departments, says it is "absolutely impossible for me to furnish anything like a correct report of the present membership."

1890 High Mark Recorded.

In 1890, however, reports taken as authentic state that the membership was 409,489, the highest mark recorded. From 1878 to 1890, the growth was rapid, being from 12,000 to 5,000 annually. Since 1890 the decline has been constant, except for a 3,000 gain in 1896, said to be due to prospects of favorable pension legislation. Subsequent enrollment figures from the time the G. A. R. reached its zenith to the present time follow:

1891	407,781
1892	399,380
1893	397,223
1894	369,035
1895	357,629
1896	340,610
1897	319,456
1898	305,603
1899	387,918
1900	276,612
1901	269,597
1902	263,510
1903	256,510
1904	247,340
1905	232,455
1906	225,823
1907	229,932
1908	225,157
1909	220,600
1910	213,901
1911	203,419
1912	191,346
1913	180,227
1914	171,335
1915	159,363
1916	149,074
1917	135,931
1918	120,916
1919	110,357
1920	103,258

The 1920 national encampment voted to meet every year as long as a single member survived. Brig. Gen. John L. Clem, address Army & Navy Club, Washington, D. C., claims himself the youngest G. A. R. member. He is thought by G. A. R. officials here to be 71 years old, having enlisted as a drummer boy at the age of 11 years. The question of who is the oldest member always brings up hundreds of claimants and no reliable record has been obtained.

LIST OF "DONT'S" FOR DRIVERS OF HORSES

Chicago—Despite the coming of the automobile there are still thirty thousand horses working today on the streets of Chicago. Faithful servants they are, whose lives are hard a best, particularly in th vry hot wathr, observes H. D. Roberts, secretary of the Chicago Anti-Cruelty Society.

"Don't drive fast. The minutes you save may cost you a horse.

"Don't put on heavy loads.

"Don't let your horse stand in the sun. Even if he has to stand for a few minutes pick out a shady place if possible to do so.

"Don't fail to water your horse as often as possible. It will not hurt him if he is worked. If you are going to let him stand for a while, only give him a small drink.

"Don't use a horse hat unless it has a canopy top. The ordinary kind is worse than none.

"If you use a sponge or cloth, see that it is kept wet. If it is dry it is worse than no protection.

"Don't fair to watch your horse closely. If he gets sick don't wait. Get him into the shade, take off the harness and bridle. Wash out his mouth. Sponge him off with cold water. Put cold water or ice on his head, and send for a doctor. Prompt action may save him.

"Don't wash your horse at night when he comes in from work. Wipe him off with a damp sponge. Let him cool off.

"Don't keep him in a hot stable at night. He must cool off at night, in order to be fit for work next day.

"Don't forget that your horse is a good friend and faithful servant.

"See that he is entitled to all the care and attention you can give him."

ROME PLANS TO BUILD A HOUSE ON HOUSE

Rome—Rome will become a city of odd appearance of the plans for the solution of the housing problem proposed by some Italian engineers are put in operation. The proposal is to build on the flat roofs of most of the buildings in Rome light houses of three and four stories.

The engineers have placed tehir ideas before Hnry Civit MacClean, United States Commercial attache to the American Embassy. They have asked that American capital become interested in the project. The material for the whole of the scheme, according to the engineers' suggestions, would come from America because of the adaptability of American light construction methods in the choice of materials and means of essembling.

Mr. MacClean has succeeded in interesting several American business men in the project and other projects along the line of building construction in Rome.

RUSSISIAN ACTIONS DISGUST AMERICAN RELIEF WORKERS

SPEND MONEY FREELY AND THEN EXPECT MORE FROM THE RELIEF SOCIETIES; AMERICANS SACRIFICE NO MORE.

Constantinople.—The Russian temperament is proving a serious obstacle to American and other relief and charitable organizations here. Individual Americans trying to help Russian refugees often give up in despair.

The Russian may be described as money blind. He is careless with his own money and with that of others. Thousands of Russian refugees arrived here with plenty of gold money, furs, jewels and portables. Without a thought for the morrow, they lived for a time in the best hotels until the money was exhausted and the valuables pawned.

Then the hotel proprietors asked them to leave and they went cheerfully to live in a squalid by-street, not only expectant but confident the Americans or some other good souls would care for them. And often it is done.

Spend 75,000 Francs

One of the tragedy-comedies of the foreign colony here is the story of the attempts of a Russian general to get his seven daughters to Paris. Dozens of persons have spent much time and money in his effort and so far three of the daughters are here and starving. The father spent 75,000 francs trying. The general, a good and capable father, got himself as far as Paris through the kind offices of United States Consul General Moser, then in Tiflis.

In Paris the father mortgaged his estates for 100,000 francs and sent 25,000 francs to his wife and seven daughters to join him. They got as far as Constantinople, bought a lot of new dresses, attended the season's dances, loaned the rest of their money to needy friends and asked father for more.

The general sent another 25,000 francs and after various difficulties about passports, the mother and four daughters departed. New loans expenditures made it impossible to take three of the daughters. Another 25,000 francs was sent to the three daughters by the father through a Russian general who pocketed it, or thoughtlessly spent it, and the daughters are still here, their clothes held for board and lodgings and they and their family in Paris are cheerfully waiting until the American relief organizations do something about it.

"Lost The Money

A certain baron, member of the Imperial Guard, 11 times wounded during the war, was all but adopted by a Chicago dentist who met him in Russia. The latter arranged for his passage to the United States, sent funds for travel expenses and waited. The handsome baron pocketed the funds and turned up at the American Embassy within a few days describing how his pocket had been picked. A cable was sent the dentist and fresh funds arrived. These funds were dissipated and still the baron did not sail. He is now waiting more funds from Chicago.

An American navy officer on station here was told by his Russian friends of their difficulties with the cruel landlord who was about to eject them. The officer gave them the needed money and was invited to dine with them. The dinner was splendidly served, including champagne. The landlord had to renew his threats, but in vain. The rent money had paid for the dinner.

Russ Help One Another

All Americans here love the Russians and do much to help them, but those with experience have ceased making heavy sacrifices to do so. The incurable optimism of the Russian leads him to build air castles and into foolish acts that have to be paid for in cold cash. When his optimism is exhausted, the Russian is so pessimistic he takes to the river. Many young men have committed suicide here. Their families in France and England and Italy send them money to join them, they spend the money for champagne or silk socks, or what not, and when the money is exhausted they shoot or drown themselves.

The devotion and the childlike cheerfulness of the Russian women here is a source of constant wonder to Americans. Many of them have forgotten they were countesses and gone to work. Their charity to one another surpasses belief. They will pawn their last jewel to help a friend. The correspondent found one woman selling her eye-glasses to help a friend, and doing it without thought of making a special sacrifice.

RICHIE MITCHELL ADVISES "KOZAK"

"I recently mentioned to my grandson, Richie, that I was feeling very nervous and run down and felt that I needed some good tonic and system-builder," said Mrs. A. Mitchell, Wauwatosa, Wis. "He got me Kozak and I took it regularly. It wasn't long before I noticed an improvement in my appetite, my food, instead of causing gas, dull pains and a bloated feeling, seemed to digest properly. It was just what I needed. I can now walk further without tiring and I sleep soundly all night through. Kozak is surely remarkable. HENRY AND THE NITRATE PLANT.

Henry Ford wants to buy the Muscle Shoals nitrate plant in Alabama from Uncle Sam. He offers to pay $5,000,000 down and $1,500,000 a year for a period of a hundred years. He also wants to purchase two dams for the electric power they will yield to run the plant. He will be content, he says, with a profit of 8 per cent on the investment. His purpose is to manufacture fertilizer as a private enterprise, but if there should be another war in which this country is engaged he would put the plant at the disposal of the government for war purposes.

Only those conversant with all the facts are able to pass competent judgment on the merits of the offer, but without knowing these facts the people of this country, common and uncommon, must be agreed that Henry would be more nearly in his natural element as a maker of fertilizer than as the angel of peace argosy or as a member of "the greatest deliberative body in the world," the United States Senate.

The world is not overburdened with fertilized. If Henry Ford can furnish a soil-quickener cheap enough to put those superannuated New England farms again on the agricultural map, and make two blades grow where only one now grows on fields of more tender years, he will be worth more to the country than all the near-statesmen put together. Under those circumstances he will be forgiven any lack of knowledge of history that he may further confess to. On with the nitrate dance if the fiddler in Washington is adequately requitted.

MANY MISSING IN G.A.R. CONVENTION TO BE HELD SOON

10,000 MEMBERS HAVE PASSED AWAY SINCE LAST CONVENTION; OHIO LEADS IN NUMBER OF "VETS" LEFT.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 16.—When the Grand Army of the Republic holds its annual reunion this year, more than 10,000 of the Civil War veterans who attended the encampment of 1920 will be counted among the missing as the ranks have been depleted to this extent through the last year.

The total membership of the G. A. R. today is 93,255 while its membership in 1920 was 103,258.

The total membership is scattered among 4445 posts in every state. Ohio, with 10,241, has the largest membership, with Pennsylvania second with 9,122; New York, third, 8,795; Illinois fourth, 6,868; Indiana fifth, 5,649; Massachusetts, sixth, 5,356. No other states have 5,000 or more members.

Property owned by all posts is valued at $2,075,027, including real estate worth $802,841.

Members in the old confederate states total approximately 2260.

Organized in Illinois.

The G. A. R. was organized in Illinois in the spring of 1866. Who its originators were is a matter of tradition rather than record, says the report made to the national encampment in 1869 by N. P. Chipman, then adjutant general of the national organization.

"There can be no doubt that the late Colonel B. F. Stephenson of Decatur, Ill., was one of the prime movers," says Chipman's report. "Being recognized as such, he organized the first post at Dakota, Ill."

By July, 1866, there were 40 posts in Illinois, representatives of which met in convention and organized the state department. Stephenson was by common consent the provisional commander-in-chief, and posts were organized in other states, resulting in the first national encampment being held at Indianapolis, Nov. 20, 1866. After the Indianapolis convention, Chipman records that "posts seem to have sprung up as if by magic in all parts of the north," but he adds there was NO records of progress. Ten states were represented at the Indianapolis convention, 21 states in 1867; 24 states in 1868; 37 states in 1869, having 2050 posts.

1860—210,000 Members.

At the 1869 encampment a mutual life insurance scheme was proposed, it being said that the state departments "claimed to represent a constituency of over 210,000." But there is NO authentic record of the number for the early years, the insurance proposal containing an estimate, it is thought, and the '67 estimate being regarded as the number of union soldiers living in the jurisdiction of the state departments represented at the convention. For instance, the adjutant general's report for the 1870 encampment, when there were 39 departments, says it is "absolutely impossible for me to furnish anything like a correct report of the present membership."

1890 High Mark Recorded.

In 1890, however, reports taken as authentic state that the membership was 409,489, the highest mark recorded. From 1878 to 1890, the growth was rapid, being from 12,000 to 85,000 annually. Since 1890 the decline has been constant, except for a 3,000 gain in 1906, said to be due to prospects of favorable pension legislation. Subsequent enrollment figures from the time the G. A. R. reached its zenith to the present time follow:

1891	407,781
1892	399,880
1893	397,223
1894	369,035
185	357,639
1896	340,610
1897	319,456
1898	305,603
1899	387,918
1900	278,612
1901	269,507
1902	263,510
1903	256,510
1904	247,340
1905	232,455
1906	235,823
1907	229,932
1908	225,157
1909	220,600
1910	213,901
1911	203,410
1912	194,346
1913	180,227

1915	159,862
1916	149,074
1917	135,931
1918	120,916
1919	110,357
1920	103,258

The 1920 national encampment voted to meet every year as long as a single member survived. Brig. Gen. John L. Clem, address Army & Navy Club, Washington, D. C., claims himself the youngest G. A. R. member. He is thought by G. A. R. officials here to be 71 years old, having enlisted as a drummer boy at the age of 11 years. The question of who is the oldest member always brings up hundreds of claimants and no reliable record has been obtained.

LIST OF "DONT'S" FOR DRIVERS OF HORSES

Chicago—Despite the coming of the automobile there are still thirty thousand horses working today on the streets of Chicago. Faithful servants hey are, whose lives are hard a best, particularly in th vry hot wathr, observes H. D. Roberts, secretary of the Chicago Anti-Cruelty Society.

"Don't drive fast. The minutes you save may cost you a horse.

"Don't put on heavy loads.

"Don't let your horse stand in the sun. Even if he has to stand for a few minutes pick out a shady place if possible to do so.

"Don't fail to water your horse as often as possible. It will not hurt him if he is worked. If you are going to let him stand for a while, only give him a small drink.

"Don't use a horse hat unless it has a canopy top. The ordinary kind is worse than none.

"If you use a sponge or cloth, see that it is kept wet. If it is dry it is worse than no protection.

"Don't fair to watch your horse closely. If he gets sick don't wait. Get him into the shade, take off the harness and bridle. Wash out his mouth. Sponge him off with cold water. Put cold water or ice on his head, and send for a doctor. Prompt action may save him.

"Don't wash your horse at night when he comes in from work. Wipe him off with a damp sponge. Let him cool off.

"Don't keep him in a hot stable at night. He must cool off at night, in order to be fit for work next day.

"Don't forget that your horse is a good friend and faithful servant.

"See that he is entitled to all the care and attention you can give him."

ROME PLANS TO BUILD A HOUSE ON HOUSE

Rome—Rome will become a city of odd appearance of the plans for the solution of the housing problem proposed by some Italian engineers are put in operation. The proposal is to build on the flat roofs of most of the buildings in Rome light houses of three and four stories.

The engineers have placed tehir ideas before Hnry Clit MacClean, United States Commercial attache to the American Embassy. They have asked that American capital become interested in the project. The material for the whole of the scheme, according to the engineers' suggestions, would come from America because of the adaptability of American light construction methods in the choice of materials and means of essembling.

Mr. MacClean has succeeded in interesting several American business men in the project and other projects along the line of building construction in Rome.

RUSSISIAN ACTIONS DISGUST AMERICAN RELIEF WORKERS

SPEND MONEY FREELY AND THEN EXPECT MORE FROM THE RELIEF SOCIETIES; AMERICANS SACRIFICE NO MORE.

Constantinople.—The Russian temperament is proving a serious obstacle to American and other relief and charitable organizations here. Individual Americans trying to help Russian refugees often give up in despair.

The Russian may be described as money blind. He is careless with his own money and with that of others. Thousands of Russian refugees arrived here with plenty of gold money, furs, jewels and portables. Without a thought for the morrow, they lived for a time in the best hotels until the money was exhausted and the valuables pawned.

Then the hotel proprietors asked them to leave and they went cheerfully to live in a squalid by-street, not only expectant but confident the Americans or some other good souls would care for them. And often it is done.

Spend 75,000 Francs

One of the tragedy-comedies of the foreign colony here is the story of the attempts of a Russian general to get his seven daughters to Paris. Dozens of persons have spent much time and money in his effort and so far three of the daughters are here and starving. The father spent 75,000 francs trying The general, a good and capable father, got himself as far as Paris through the kind offices of United States Consul General Moser, then in Tiflis.

In Paris the father mortgaged his estates for 100,000 francs and sent 25,000 francs to his wife and seven daughters to join him. They got as far as Constantinople, bought a lot of new dresses, attended the sanson's dances, loaned the rest of their money to needy friends and asked father for more.

The general sent another 25,000 francs and after various difficulties about passports, the mother and four daughters departed. New loans expenditures made it impossible to take three of the daughters. Another 25,000 francs was sent to the three daughters by the father through a Russian general who pocketed it, or thoughtlessly spent it, and the daughters are still here, their clothes held for board and lodgings and they and their family in Paris are cheerfully waiting untill the American relief organizations do something about it.

"Lost The Money

A certain baron, member of the Imperial Guard, 11 times wounded during the war, was all but adopted by a Chicago dentist who met him in Russia. The latter arranged for his passage to the United States, sent funds for travel expenses and feed waited. The handsome baron pocketed the funds and turned up at the American Embassy within a few days describing how his pocket had been picked. A cable was sent the dentist and fresh funds arrived. These funds were dissipated and still the baron did not sail. He is now waiting more funds from Chicago.

An American navy officer on station here was told by his Russian friends of their difficulties with the cruel landlord who was about to eject them. The officer gave them the needed money and was invited to dine with them. The dinner was splendidly served, including champagne. The landlord had to renew his threats, but in vain. The rent money had paid for the dinner.

Russ Help One Another

All Americans here love the Russians and do much to help them, but those with experience have ceased making heavy sacrifices to do so. The incurable optimism of the Russian leads him to build air castles and into foolish acts that have to be paid for in cold cash. When his optimism is exhausted, the Russian is so pessimistic he takes to the river. Many young men have committed suicide here. Their families in France and England and Italy send them money to join them, they spend the money for champagne or silk socks, or what not, and when the money is exhausted they shoot or drown themselves.

The devotion and the childlike cheerfulness of the Russian women here is a source of constant wonder to Americans. Many of them have forgotten they were countesses and gone to work. Their charity to one another surpasses belief. They will pawn their last jewel to help a friend. The correspondent found one woman selling her eye-glasses to help a friend, and doing it without thought of making a special sacrifice.

The college boarding house is disappearing—it now serves not more than 15 or 20 per cent of the students at the University of Wisconsin.

Love is like a corkscrew—an awful bore but necessary.

RICHIE MITCHELL ADVISES "KOZAK"

Grandmother of Famous Wisconsin Athlete is Grateful.

"I recently mentioned to my grandson, Richie, that I was feeling very nervous and run down and felt that I needed some good tonic and system-builder," said Mrs. A. Mitchell, Wauwatosa, Wis. He got me Kozak and I took it regularly. It wasn't long before I noticed an improvement in my appetite, my food, instead of causing gas, dull pains and a bloated feeling, seemed to digest properly. It was just what I needed. I can now walk further without tiring and I sleep soundly all night through. Kozak is surely remarkable. Sold here only by Sam Church; Amherst, Boynton; Marshfield, Leise.

New York—The New York Nationals scored their second crushing victory over Pittsburg in the present series, winning on Monday 12 to 1. The Giants scored eight runs in the fourth inning, when two pitching youngsters, Morrison and Glazner, were batted hard.

Brooklin—Chicago made it three out of four from Brooklyn by winning on Monday, 8 to 1. Ponder allowed the Superbas eleven hits, but was saved by good fielding. Rether, in his first appearance since his 10 day suspension, was wild.

Boston—Boston defeated St. Louis, 14 to 8, in a slugging match on Monday. St. Louis used five pitchers.

Philadelphia—Cincinnati took both ends of a double header from Philadelphia on Monday by the same score 9 to 5. Peter Donahue, a recruit from Christian Brothers' College, Texas, relieved Marquard in the first inning of the first game after the Phillies had secured four runs and held the home team to four scattered hits for the remaining eight and two-thirds innings. Eller was the winning pitcher in the second game though he was taken out of the box in the seventh inning when the Phillies staged a brief rally.

Chicago—Chicago took both games of a double header from Boston on Monday, winning the first game 5 to 4 in 10 innings and the second, 7 to 3. Errors playing gave the visitors an early lead in the initial contest and the locals were compelled to play an uphill game, the winning run coming in the tenth inning when Pitcher Jones walked McClellan forcing in the winning tally. Hodge pitched in great form in the second game. A ninth inning batting rally by the White Sox gave them the victory.

Detroit—Babe Ruth hit his longest home run of the season here on Monday, sending the ball over the corner of the center field fence in the eighth ining of a game that New York won easily, 10 to 1. The ball hit the ground 560 feet from the home plate. Ruth's former record for the season was 460 feet, the blow being delivered at the Polo grounds. It was Ruth's thirty-sixth circuit drive this year, and was made off Cole. The slugger scored one runner ahead of him.

Cleveland—Cleveland defeated Washington, 3 to 2, on Monday in a pitchers' battle between Sothoron and Mogridge. The former was wild, but held Washington to six hits, two of which were bunched with a pass in the sixth. Cleveland scored the tying and winning runs on Sewell's triple, errors by Harris and O'Rourke and Evans' single.

St. Louis—Error by Galloway, a hit batsman, two passes and three hits in the eighth inning on Monday gave the St. Louis four tallies and a 4 to 2 victory over Philadelphia. Harris' winning streak was broken. He previously had pitched eight successive victories for the Athletics.

St. Paul—After Grimes' home run with two on in the seventh had increased Toledo's lead, St. Paul tied the score with two out in the ninth. Miller's eighteenth home run of the season accounting for two runs, and Armstrong's single after a couple of passes, bringing in the third. Thorp won the game for the visitors when he hit a home run with two out in the tenth. Wright relieved McCullough before the tying run was scored in the ninth.

Minneapolis—Columbus lost the first game of a four game series here on Monday, 5 to 1. The Millers hit Danforth in the pinches and he was relieved when a man batted for him in the eighth. The Millers got one run in the eighth off Sherman.

Milwaukee—Unser Choe Hauser, Jim Cooney and King Lear went on a head pre-Volstead batting jag on Monday and they clubbed the offerings of Jess Petty so hard that the Brewers romped off with a 9 to 2 win.

PROVES THAT MANY ARE AFTER THE MAZUMA

Chicago—The manner in which man will attempt to assist his fellow creature, for financial return or otherwise, is shown in the number of replies received as the result of an article published a year ago which erroneously stated that Benjamin Hyde, a retired contractor, would give $1,000 to any one who could tell him how to obtain sleep without the use of medicines.

The article misquoted Mr. Hyde, who is suffering from paralysis agitans, and more than 3,000 letters were written giving him varied lines of advice as to how to sleep.

Mr. Hyde has recently made another offer of $2,000 but in order to avoid answers from irresponsible persons he has confined the offer of the reward to "physicians of good standing". His condition is that the cure permanently free him from tremors and muscular contractions and enable him to sit in a chair without having pains in his back.

8,000 ACRES OF HEMP IN STATE THIS YEAR

Madison, Wis.—Fully 8,000 acres of Wisconsin's richest soil is growing crops of hemp this year. This, according to A. H. Wright of the Agronomy department of the University of Wisconsin, is the largest acreage of hemp ever planted in the state. Mr. Wright also reports that practically all of it is growing in soil that is especially adapted to the crop.

Gradually increasing from 40 acres in 1914 the state has risen to a position of leadership in the production of this great fiber crop. Wisconsin is this year producing 70 per cent of the total hemp acreage of the United States. The condition of the crop is very satisfactory in all but two sections of the state. Wisconsin's crop is all grown within hauling distance of the hemp mills.

Planted somewhat earlier than in the past seasons, the 1921 stand was not damaged in any way by the weather conditions. The seed sown this spring was of good quality and Mr. Wright has found the stand everywhere in the state better than it ever has been before.

COUNTY AGENTS WILL HOLD CONVENTION

Rhinelander—A big parade, with floats from each county depicting an important contribution to Wisconsin's agriculture, will be a feature of the county agent decennial celebration here August 10-11. It is expected that all of the fifty counties of the state which now have county agents will help to make this parade a splendid pageant of the state's greatest industry.

In November, 1911, Oneida county first took advantage of the opportunity given for trying out the county agent plan. Since then the plan has spread to other counties of the state and to every state in the Union and has developed into one of the greatest modern agricultural movements.

In the pageant of counties Ozaukee will present a float illustrating the advance which has been made in that county through the work in drainage. Bayfield will show what has been accomplished in its cut-over sections through cooperation in land clearing. Other counties will exhibit floats as follows: Burnett, Farmers Clubs; Barron, Tuberculosis Clean-up; Brown, Purebred Seed Improvement; Door, Livestock Improvement; LaCrosse, Field Crops Improvement; Polk, Butter Marketing; Oconto, Farmers Clubs; Winnebago, Boys and Girls Club Work; Portage, Potato Improvement; Jefferson, Farm Poultry Raising; Grant, Orchard Pruning and Spraying; and Waukesha, Dairy Improvement.

RICKARD SIGNS GIBBONS UP FOR BOUT WITH CARP

MEN TO MEET IN OCTOBER IN BOUT FOR LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD; AMERICA CONFIDENT.

New York, July 18.—(Special)—Tom Gibbon, the St. Paul scrapper, has been selected as Georges Carpentier's next opponent. Eddie Kane, who pilots the affair of Thomas, stepped in on Tex Rickard this afternoon, and, after a conference lasting less than half an hour, Kane tossed his signature all over the dotted line calling for a contest to be staged the second week in October for the lightweight championship of the world. Rickard did not announce the terms for the contest, but it is expected he will do so in a few days.

It has not been definitely settled whether the battle will be held at Jersey City, or at Madison Square Garden. The weight will be 175 pounds, but the number of rounds will be determined when the battleground is finally selected.

Rickard Cables Georges

As soon as Kane had affixed his John Hancock to the parchment, Rickard cabled Carpentier and his manager, Francois Deschamps, notifying them that Gibbons was the choice in the next little scramble for which the French party had signed articles with Rickard two weeks ago.

Kane promised Rickard that he will have his protegee on the scene of the battleground three weeks before the bout. Gibbons is now on a vacation in the Minnesota woods, where he will remain until called out for the necessary training stunts.

Manager Is Confident

When Kane emerged from Rickard's office he sent word to Tom and announced his charge would show the world in his jam with the Frenchman just how good a fighter he really is.

Kane is dead sure that Gibbons will take the flashy French fighter and then for a trip with the champion, Dempsey.

Man's calibre can be measured by the manner in which he speaks of another's success, says Diogenese Dinkle, Whig Hill philosopher.

STUDENTS PLAN DRIVE FOR STADIUM FUNDS

Cincinnati, O.—Students and alumni of the University of Cincinnati this autumn will engage in a drive for $15,000 to build the first three sections of a new stadium at Carson Field. Originally it was the plan to erect the stadium complete at an estimated cost of $125,000, but the university board of trustees authorized only the initial units.

When these are completed, probably by the opening of the football season, the field will seat 5,000. Twenty other sections are to be built from time to time as athletics develop at the municipal university, ultimately bringing the seating capacity to 15,000.

Probably no stadium in the country will have a more picturesque setting than Cincinnati's. Designed in the shape of a horseshoe, the open end at the north will give a wide sweep of country while the east and west flanks will be built on rather steep hillsides. This natural advantage will substantially cut the cost of construction. The stadium will be of concrete with ornamental entrances.

PEOPLE ARE LIVING IN STONE AGE STYLE

London—People who are still living in the manner of the Stone Age are found on Rennell Island in the Solomon Group, Melanesia, according to Dr. Northcote Deck, a missionary.

Dr. Deck says there are only about 500 inhabitants, and because of their isolation, through lack of ship's anchorage, even their dialect has never been studied.

The natives only had implements and weapons of stone and wood when Dr. Deck first visited the island. They showed great eagerness to barter home-made articles for anything made of iron.

"The men are great fighters and wrestlers. Their throwing spears have points made of human leg and arm bones, and tipped with a bone splinter designed to break off in the wound," says Dr. Deck.

"They seemed to feel keenly the monotony of their isolation and showed a settled melancholy, both in their faces and the cadence of their voices. Their only sort of music, to which they dance, consists in the tuneless beating of a log."

The teeth of flying foxes which swarm in the caves on the island seem to be the only form of currency known there.

30 PERFORMANCES OF PASSION PLAY ARE SCHEDULED

1,500,000 MARKS REQUIRED TO STAGE THE EVENT; NEED TOURIST PATRONAGE TO MAKE FINANCIAL SUCCESS

Oberammergau, Bavaria—Thirty performances of the Passion Play have been scheduled for 1922 by the committee of 21 which is directing the spectacle, but this number will be increased if the attendance demands, as was the case both in 1900 and 1910.

It will require an outlay of 1,500,000 marks to stage the Oberammergau play and the villagers are extremely anxious about the German political situation, lest conditions be such that foreigners will not attend.

Vow to Produce Play

The 260 burghers, who constitute the descendants of the original peasants who made the vow to produce the play decennially, personally assume the responsibility for this expenditure, and the failure to attract sufficient visitors to meet the cost would result in the bankruptcy of practically the entire village, as the Oberammergau folk have slight resources.

Most of the burghers are woodcarvers, potters, painters, sculptors, farmers, merchants and small shopkeepers. Only the descendants of the villagers who were saved from the plague in 1633 take part in the Passion Play and assume responsibility for its production.

Next October will be a fateful month for then the names of the villagers who are to have the leading roles in the spectacle will be announced.

To be selected to enact the role of Jesus Christ or one of the apostles is a far greater honor to an Oberammergau man than election to the presidency of Germany or any other office within the gift of the entire German people.

And any woman of Oberammergau would far rather be chosen to play the role of Mary or Martha or Mary Magdalene than to be in the position of Frau Ebert as mistress of the President's palace in Berlin.

Old Actors to Have Parts

Many of the actors in the Passion Play next year will doubtless be the same as those in the cast when the play was last produced in 1910. Anton Lang, who enacted the role of Jesus Christ in 1900 and 1910, will probably be chosen for the part again, as he is still young enough to undertake the arduous task and looks the part so well that younger aspirants are not likely to displace him.

"Mary" Married

Ottilie Zwink, who played the role of Mary in 1910, has married since that time. No married woman can play a role. Consequently all the young women of Oberammergau with ability and experience as actors are eagerly trying to qualify for the highly important part. Paula Rendl, daughter of Peter Rendl, the sculptor, who was Joseph of Arimathea, in the play of 1910 and enacted the role of St. John 21 years ago, is one of the most promising candidates for the role of Mary. Fraulein Rendl has shown great ability in minor religious plays which are produced constantly by the Oberammergau folk as a means of training actors for the Passion Play.

Marie Mayr, who played the role of Mary Magdalene in the 1910 production, has also married and is living in Chicago. Marie Schmid, who was the Veronica in the last production, has also married.

82 Died in the War

Eighty-two of the Oberammergau men died during the war and many of the older actors of the last production will be disqualified by age for important roles. Consequently there are scores of places in the cast to which young men with ability as actors may aspire. They have begun to let their hair grow. Wigs and makeup are not permitted by the directors of the Passion Play.

Practically all the older men who had important parts in the last production have never cut their hair. Many of them have retained their long beards and pride themselves on their resemblance to the biblical characters they have depicted.

Do Your Headaches Make You Ashamed

Tuesday Health Talk No. 39.

(By W. C. Weirick, D. C.)

Do your headaches come at times that cause you embarrassment and annoyance? The victim of headaches is nearly always sure to be "knocked out" just at the climax of some effort, as in the hurry and rush to get ready for a wedding, or a lawn party, or a vacation trip.

Headaches are due to various causes, and the chiropractor who knows his business will not promise immediate relief, though he is quite often able in one adjustment to stop the ache. There are stomach headaches, bilious headaches, etc., and in each case the cause is the same, namely, weakened transmission of nerve impulses to the organ at fault. By chiropractic spinal adjustments the cause is removed, and the victim of chronic headaches once more enjoys health.

Uncle Ben Says: "Nevvy, the best thing for a male or female nag in matrimonial harness is a little horse sense."

Continual Headaches Entirely Disappear.

"Constant belching of gas made my life miserable. I was told I had heart trouble. My left arm at times felt asleep. I had headaches almost continually. Chiropractic spinal adjustments for two months and the belching of gas is gone, heart symptoms have left, and the headaches also. For this I thank chiropractic.—Mrs. L. New York—The New York Nationals scored their second crushing victory over Pittsburg in the present series, winning on Monday 12 to 1. The Giants scored eight runs in the fourth inning, when two pitching youngsters, Morrison and Glazner, were batted hard.

Brooklin—Chicago made it three out of four from Brooklyn by winning on Monday, 8 to 1. Ponder allowed the Superbas eleven hits, but was saved by good fielding. Ruether, in his first appearance since his 10 day suspension, was wild.

Boston—Boston defeated St. Louis, 14 to 8, in a slugging match on Monday. St. Louis used five pitchers.

Philadelphia—Cincinnati took both ends of a double header from Philadelphia on Monday by the same score 9 to 5. Peter Donahue, a recruit from Christian Brothers' College, Texas, relieved Marguard in the first inning of the first game after the Phillies had secured four runs and held the home team to four scattered hits for the remaining eight and two-thirds innings. Eller was the wining pitcher in the second game though he was taken out of the box in the seventh inning when the Phillies staged a brief rally.

Chicago—Chicago took both games of a double header from Boston on Monday, winning the first game 5 to 4 in 10 innings and the second, 4 to 3. Erratic playing gave the visitors an early lead in the initial contest and the locals were compelled to play an uphill game, the winning run coming in the tenth inning when Pitcher Jones walked McClellan forcing in the winning tally. Hodge pitched in great form in the second game. A ninth inning batting rally by the White Sox gave them the victory.

Detroit—Babe Ruth hit his longest home run of the season here on Monday, sending the ball over the corner of the center field fence in the eighth ining of a game that New York won easily, 10 to 1. The ball hit the ground 560 feet from the home plate. Ruth's former record for the season was 460 feet, the blow being delivered at the Polo grounds. It was Ruth's thirty-sixth circuit drive this year, and was made off Cole. The slugger scored one runner ahead of him.

Cleveland—Cleveland defeated Washington, 3 to 2, on Monday in a pitchers' battle between Sothoron and Mogridge. The former was wild, but held Washington to six hits, two of which were bunched with a pass in the sixth. Cleveland scored the tying and winning runs on Sewell's triple, errors by Harris and O'Rourke and Evans' single.

St. Louis—Error by Galloway, a hit batsman, two passes and three hits in the eighth inning on Monday gave the St. Louis four tallies and a 4 to 2 victory over Philadelphia. Harris' winning streak was broken. He previously had pitched eight successive victories for the Athletics.

St. Paul—After Grimes' home run with two on in the seventh had increased Toledo's lead, St. Paul tied the score with two out in the ninth. Miller's eighteenth home run of the season accounting for two runs, and Armstrong's single after a couple of passes, bringing in the third. Thorp won the game for the visitors when he hit a home run with two out in the tenth. Wright relieved McCullough before the tying run was scored in the ninth.

Minneapolis—Columbus lost the first game of a four game series here on Monday, 5 to 1. The Millers hit Danforth in the pinches and he was relieved when a man batted for him in the eighth. The Millers got one run in in eighth off Sherman.

Milwaukee—Unser Choe Hauser, Jim Cooney and King Lear went on a read pre-Volstead batting jag on Monday and they clubbed the offerings of Jess Petty so hard that the Brewers romped off with a 9 to 2 win.

PROVES THAT MANY ARE AFTER THE MAZUMA

Chicago—The manner in which man will attempt to assist his fellow creature, for financial return or otherwise, is shown in the number of replies received as the result of an article published a year ago which erroneously stated that Benjamin Hyde, a retired contractor, would give $1,000 to any one who could tell him how to obtain sleep without the use of medicines.

The article misquoted Mr. Hyde, who is suffering from paralysis agitans, and more than 3,000 letters were written giving him varied lines of advice as to how to sleep.

Mr. Hyde has recently made another offer of $2,000 but in order to avoid answers from irresponsible persons he has confined the offer of the reward to "physicians of good standing". His condition is that the cure permanently free him from tremors and muscular contractions and enable him to sit in a chair without having pains in his back.

8,000 ACRES OF HEMP IN STATE THIS YEAR

Madison, Wis.—Fully 8,000 acres of Wisconsin's richest soil is growing crops of hemp this year. This, according to A. H. Wright of the Agronomy department of the University of Wisconsin, is the largest acreage of hemp ever planted in the state. Mr. Wright also reports that practically all of it is growing in soil that is especially adapted to the crop.

Gradually increasing from 40 acres in 1914 the state has risen to a position of leadership in the production of this great fiber crop. Wisconsin is this year producing 70 per cent of the total hemp acreage of the United States. The condition of the crop is very satisfactory in all but two sections of the state. Wisconsin's crop is all grown within hauling distance of the hemp mills.

Planted somewhat earlier than in the past seasons, the 1921 stand was not damaged in any way by the weather conditions. The seed sown this spring was of good quality and Mr. Wright has found the stand everywhere in the state better than it ever has been before.

COUNTY AGENTS WILL HOLD CONVENTION

Rhinelander—A big parade, with floats from each county depicting an important contribution to Wisconsin's agriculture, will be a feature of the county agent decennial celebration here August 10-11. It is expected that all of the fifty counties of the state which now have county agents will help to make this parade a splendid pageant of the state's greatest industry.

In November, 1911, Oneida county first took advantage of the opportunity given for trying out the county agent plan. Since then the plan has spread to other counties of the state and to every state in the Union and has developed into one of the greatest modern agricultural movements.

In the pageant of counties Ozaukee will present a float illustrating the advance which has been made in that county through the work in drainage. Bayfield will show what has been accomplished in its cut-over sections through cooperation in land clearing. Other counties will exhibit floats as follows: Burnett, Farmers Clubs; Barron, Tuberculosis Clean-up; Brown, Purebred Seed Improvement; Door, Livestock Improvement; LaCrosse, Field Crops Improvement; Polk, Butter Marketing; Oconto, Farmers Clubs; Winnebago, Boys and Girls Club Work; Portage, Potato Improvement; Jefferson, Farm Poultry Raising; Grant, Orchard Pruning and Spraying; and Waukesha, Dairy Improvement.

RICKARD SIGNS GIBBONS UP FOR BOUT WITH CARP

MEN TO MEET IN OCTOBER IN BOUT FOR LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD; AMERICA CONFIDENT.

New York, July 18.—(Special)—Tom Gibbon, the St. Paul scrapper, has been selected as Georges Carpentier's next opponent. Eddie Kane, who pilots the affair of Thomas, stepped in on Tex Rickard this afternoon, and, after a conference lasting less than half an hour, Kane tossed his signature all over the dotted line calling for a contest to be staged the second week in October for the lightweight championship of the world. Rickard did not announce the terms for the contest, but it is expected he will do so in a few days.

It has not been definitely settled whether the battle will be held at Jersey City, or at Madison Square Garden. The weight will be 175 pounds, but the number of rounds will be determined when the battleground is finally selected.

Rickard Cables Georges

As soon as Kane had affixed his John Hancock to the parchment, Rickard cabled Carpentier and his manager, Francois Deschamps, notifying them that Gibbons was the choice in the next little scramble for which the French party had signed articles with Rickard two weeks ago.

Kane promised Rickard that he will have his protegee on the scene of the battleground three weeks before the bout. Gibbons is now on a vacation in the Minnesota woods, where he will remain until called out for the necessary training stunts.

Manager Is Confident

When Kane emerged from Rickard's office he sent word to Tom and announced his charge would show the world in his jam with the Frenchman just how good a fighter he really is.

Kane is dead sure that Gibbons will take the flashy French fighter and then for a trip with the champion, Dempsey.

Man's calibre can be measured by the manner in which he speaks of another's success, says Diogenese Dinkle, Whig Hill philosopher.

STUDENTS PLAN DRIVE FOR STADIUM FUNDS

Cincinnati, O.—Students and alumni of the University of Cincinnati this autumn will engage in a drive for $15,000 to build the first three sections of a new stadium at Carson Field. Originally it was the plan to erect the stadium complete at an estimated cost of $125,000, but the university board of trustees authorized only the initial units.

When these are completed, probably by the opening of the football season, the field will seat 5,000. Twenty other sections are to be built from time to time as athletics develop at the municipal university, ultimately bringing the seating capacity to 15,000.

Probably no stadium in the country will have a more picturesque setting than Cincinnati's. Designed in the shape of a horseshoe, the open end at the north will give a wide sweep of country while the east and west flanks will be built on rather steep hillsides. This natural advantage will substantially cut the cost of construction. The stadium will be of concrete with ornamental entrances.

PEOPLE ARE LIVING IN STONE AGE STYLE

London—People who are still living in the manner of the Stone Age are found on Rennell Island in the Solomon Group, Melanesia, according to Dr. Northcote Deck, a missionary.

Dr. Deck says there are only about 500 inhabitants, and because of their isolation, through lack of ship's anchorage, even their dialect has never been studied.

The natives only had implements and weapons of stone and wood when Dr. Deck first visited the island. They showed great eagerness to barter home-made articles for anything made of iron.

"The men are great fighters and wrestlers. Their throwing spears have points made of human leg and arm bones, and tipped with a bone splinter designed to break off in the wound," says Dr. Deck.

"They seemed to feel keenly the monotony of their isolation and showed a settled melancholy, both in their faces and the cadence of their voices. Their only sort of music, to which they dance, consists in the tuneless beating of a log."

The teeth of flying foxes which swarm in the caves on the island seem to be the only form of currency known there.

Oberammergau, Bavaria—Thirty performances of the Passion Play have been scheduled for 1922 by the committee of 21 which is directing the spectacle, but this number will be increased if the attendance demands, as was the case both in 1900 and 1910.

It will require an outlay of 1,500,000 marks to stage the Oberammergau play and the villagers are extremely anxious about the German political situation, lest conditions be such that foreigners will not attend.

ADEQUATE FUNDS INSURE GROWTH OF STATE UNIVERSITY

APPROPRIATIONS OF $5,000,000 ANNUALLY AUTHORIZED BY LEGISLATURE MAKING PROGRESS OF INSTITUTION POSSIBLE.

(By Associated Press)

Madison, Wis., July 18.—The University of Wisconsin will be able to carry on its work with full vigor during the next two years on a growth of the legislature's appropriation of approximately $5,000,000 President E. A. Birge said today in a statement to the newspapers of Wisconsin. No comprehensive plan for expansion during the next two years was taken, according to the president.

There is adequate provision for a moderate increase in the number of students, which now totals over 7,000, he said although pointing out that the appropriations for buildings represent only a fraction of the needs, and the condition of the institution is worthy of serious concern in regard to those details of equipment depend on space.

"But the financial situation that prevented the last biennial appropriation for new building projects for any department and all branches and the university has gone so many years without adequate additions to buildings that only large projects could meet its needs.

The appropriation bill for the university provides about $5,000,000 for each year of the coming biennium. Of this sum, something more than $3,000,000 comes from the state at large for 1921-22 and a somewhat smaller sum for 1922-23. The remainder nearly $1,700,000 comes from student fees, sales of farm projects, the U. S. Government and other agencies.

During the past three years the university has increased in its size rising from 4,500 students in 1917 to 7,165 in 1920. It is not expected however, that this marked rise will be repeated, but rather that there will be a steady growth due to the increase in the number of graduates from high schools of the state.

Leading Professor Retained

The university is also fortunate in having been able to retain practically all of its leading professors, men whose talents and accomplishments have added much to the fame of the institution. An appropriation sufficient for immediate needs will permit continued broad activity which is an inducement to the faculty members.

Namely any salary increases were included in the budget accepted by the legislature. The increase granted in 1919 brought the general scale up to that of other universities and is being maintained.

BRITISH FORCES SEEK FOR ARMS IN BAKERY

Vienna—Workmen officials have just turned the tough on the Allied Military Control Commission in retaliation for two months chase of their cooperative bakery for arms.

The British officer in charge, unaided by a first investigation of the premises, returned with a large force and opened a number of heavy crates. He found them filled with buns used in the distribution of bread.

Next day the workmen secured the keys and went to the house of a man named Hawlicky, a high official of the Austrian Union of Officers of the Front. They got five machine guns in perfect condition, a number of rifles, a quantity of hand bombs and ammunition.

NATIONAL SWINE SHOW TO BE HELD IN PEORIA

Chicago—The national swine show will be held in Peoria, Ill., this year, from Oct. 3 to 7, it is announced here by the National Swine Growers' Association. The show has the assistance of a $15,000 appropriation recently voted by the state legislature, and under the same aid it will be held next year again in Peoria. Contracts were signed this week.

Prizes totalling $20,000 will be awarded this Fall, W. J. Carmichael, secretary of the swine growers' association, adds to the announcement. This is the largest amount ever offered on this occasion.

Prospects are bright for the best college students' judgine contest yet held at the national swine show, five different colleges now planning to enter, Mr. Carmichael reports.

The same states that led in hog production ten years ago hold their relative positions today, according to a review of recent census figures in The Hogman, organ of the National Swine Growers' Association. This is its list:

Iowa, 7,864,394 swine on farms in 1920.
Illinois, 4,640,447.
Missouri, 3,888,677.
Indiana, 3,757,135.
Nebraska, 3,441,917.
Ohio, 3,083,846.

These six states are the only ones which reported more than 3,000,000 swine in 1920.

LAKES TRAINING STATION TO HAVE TRAINING SHIPS

U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.—Thousands of middle western and western boys who trained for naval service here during the war without ever seeing a naval vessel may come back next year and find training ships and submarine chasers riding at anchor under the high bluffs of Lake Michigan.

Work began this month on a $1,500,000 harbor which congress recently authorized for the training station. When completed, late next summer, the basin will provide room for six or seven ships drawing twenty feet to ride at anchor.

A breakwater of riprap and concrete is being built to enclose an area approximately a half mile long and a quarter mile wide, with an entrance to the southeast. The enclosed harbor, besides affording an anchorage on this unprotected shore for training ships and chasers, will be used as a take-off basin for seaplanes of the aviation mechanics school and for small boat drill. Owing to the lack of protection from the open lake the seaplanes are now unable to fly in rough weather.

"WHAT TO WEAR" DOES NOT BOTHER NEAR EAST

Constantinople—What to wear isn't counted among Near East Problems. Recently an American, newly arrived, made the round of the local stores for a bathing suit. Finally he found a pair of brief tights. When he complained that he wanted a two-piece suit, the merchant answered: "We can't afford to carry dead stock. Most people are satisfied without that much."

At the American Embassy there is one "High" or top silk hat which is at the common disposition of those civil officials who are obliged to have such an article on rare occasions, such as funerals of local dignitaries. The hat was discarded by a pre-war official.

SENATE WILL ACT ON DISMISSAL OF U. S. ARMY OFFICER

CAPTAIN CHAMBERLAIN DISCHARGED FOR "SCANDALOUS CONDUCT" WILL BE GIVEN CHANCE TO CLEAR RECORD BY SENATE

Washington, D. C.—Unique among the stories of individual exploits in the world war was that told by Captain Edmund G. Chamberlain, a young marine corps aviator from San Antonio, Texas. It was cabled to the United States by the official Committee on Public Information late in August, 1918, and carried to the American people a new thrill in a time of daily thrills when Allied arms every where on the western front were demonstrating supremacy over the forces of the Central Powers. On the basis of the aviator's story the Navy Department recommended that the highest honor for gallantry and courage—the Congressional Medal of Honor—be bestowed upon him.

Convicted by Court Martial

The story which was of a sensational air duel on a British sector of the western front on July 28, 1918, however, remained unchallenged for but a short while and before a year had passed the San Antonio aviator and Princeton and University of Texas graduates stood convicted by court martial of "scandalous conduct detrimental to good morals and falsehood." Review of the court martial proceedings by Secretary of Navy Daniels upheld the findings of the court and dismissal from service followed for Captain Chamberlain.

Chamberlain's Story

Chamberlain's story was that while on furlough he visited a British sector, secured permission of the officer in command to accompany an aerial expedition which was to escort a bombing party over the German lines. While on this expedition, according to his story, he became separated from his comrades and was engaged by a number of German planes. In the resulting battle, Chamberlain was reported as relating, he shot down five of the German planes, damaged two others, and sweeping earthward in his own damaged plane scattered a small detachment of German soldiers. He said that after landing he took a German prisoner by pretending that the compass from his plane was a bomb and with the aid of his prisoner carried a wounded French colonial back to safety.

Denial of the exploit by British officers after wide publicity had been given it in English newspapers as well as in the American press led to inquiry at the instance of Rear Admiral Sims the then commander-in-chief of American naval forces in European waters. On the basis of the inquiry the court martial was ordered.

Dismissed by Daniels

The proceedings of the court martial, held in London and Paris, were quite lengthy and were bitterly contested. British as well as American officers submitted testimony. The findings of the court martial which recommended dismissal from service were forwarded to Secretary Daniels and Captain Chamberlain was ordered home. He remained under arrest in the District of Columbia for a number of months and on December 8 1919, Secretary Daniels formally approved the findings and ordered his dismissal from service. The action of the secretary was approved by President Wilson nearly two years later.

Immediately upon President Wilson's action in the matter Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas proposed a Senate investigation of the case with special reference as to the fairness of the court martial. The resolution directing the inquiry was not acted on and in June of this year the Texas senator again offered his resolution. The Senate Naval Affairs Committee this time reported it unanimously and it was adopted by the Senate. The inquiry was conducted by a sub-committee of the Naval Affairs Committee consisting of Senator R. Ball, republican, Delaware, chairman, Nicholson Republican, Colorado, and Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

COPPER MINING SHUT DOWN; TOWNS DESERTED

Sydney.—Inactivity in the copper mining industry has caused the practical desertion of the populations from the towns of Cobar and Broken Hills.

At one time Cobar boasted a population of several thousand people. Now it is but a collection of bare shacks, with its people gone.

Broken Hills, another mining town that in its heydey had a population of 50,000, is also desolated. Early in 1919, when the town's products were selling at high figures, the miners struck and remained out two years, during which time the bottom fell from the metal markets. When the miners were ready to return to work, the operators found they could work the mines only at a loss.

Owners of the mines told the men of their problems and offered to work the properties, without profit, for the sake of the miners, if the men would take wage reductions of about twenty per cent. The men, although depending upon the government for food, voted down the proposals. It was charged that radicals led in the movement to defeat the return to work.

U. S. TARIFF WILL NOT AFFECT CANADIAN WHEAT

Regina, Sask.—Wheat prices in the Canadian west will not be affected by the new American tariff, except insofar as this interference with free shipment to the United States may be exploited by market manipulators, according to J. B. Musselman, central secretary for the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association.

"So long as the United States requires Western Canadian hard wheat for blending with her own winter wheat, it would seem that her own people will have to pay the import duty on it, besides under a handicap in competing with Canadian Millers when it is considered that imported wheat is used for blending in making flour for export to Europe," Mr. Musselman said.

The Canadian meat industry, however, Mr. Musselman believes, will be hard hit by this new tariff.

"The effect of this new tariff on our meat industry is likely to be very much more detrimental to the farmers of this country, especially as Canada has practically no other market for live cattle," he said.

Julesberg, Colo.—Believing that Ralph Rosell, clothing merchant, had tried to induce his wife to accompany him on a party J. J. Baker, prosperous young rancher, killed Rosell, Sheriff Humberstone said Baker shot the wrong man.

The old custom of holding and hitting should be legislated out of boxing, according to Jim Corbett, former champion. If John L. had been as good a long distance runner as Jim, prize ring history would read differently.

BREACH BETWEEN GOVERNMENT AND UNIVERSITIES CAUSES STUDENT RIOTS AND DISMISSAL OF PROFESSORS

Lima, Peru—Scholastic activities at San Marcos university, the oldest educational institution in South America, have been virtually paralyzed for more than two months as a result of a controversy, said to be largely political, between the government and the university.

The student body, numbering more than 1,000 is said to be divided in opinion with regard to the dispute which became more acute lately when the government issued a decree declaring the university in process of reorganization and dismissed Doctor Xavier Prado, the rector and about 50 professors who had taken an "unauthorized recess."

Deadlock Exists

A virtual deadlock now exists between the opposing elements. The difficulty is said to have had its origin in a lecture given at the university by Dr. Belaunde, of the faculty of international law, shortly after his return from the United States. Among other things the speaker is alleged to have attacked some of the government's policies. The criticism was resented by groups in the audience and the meeting ended amid riotous scenes. Gendarmes and the police intervened and dispersed the crowd after about 100 shots were fired and some damage done to property. Several persons were injured.

Professors Discharged

A group of professors charged that the "sanctity of university thought had been invaded" and refused to continue their duties.

The university council called a general assembly of professors and students to discuss the situation whereupon the government intervened and dismissed the rector and about 50 striking professors.

Here's why CAMELS are the quality cigarette

BECAUSE we put the utmost quality into this one brand. Camels are as good as it's possible for skill, money and lifelong knowledge of fine tobaccos to make a cigarette.

Nothing is too good for Camels. And bear this in mind! Everything is done to make Camels the best cigarette it's possible to buy. Nothing is done simply for show.

Take the Camel package for instance. It's the most perfect packing science can devise to protect cigarettes and keep them fresh. Heavy paper—secure foil wrapping—revenue stamp to seal the fold and make the package air-tight. But there's nothing flashy about it. You'll find no extra wrappers. No frills or furbelows.

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And remember—you must pay their extra cost or get lowered quality.

If you want the smoothest, mellowest, mildest cigarette you can imagine—and one entirely free from cigaretty aftertaste,

It's Camels for you.

Here's why CAMELS are the quality cigarette

BECAUSE we put the utmost quality into this one brand. Camels are as good as it's possible for skill, money and lifelong knowledge of fine tobaccos to make a cigarette.

Nothing is too good for Camels. And bear this in mind! Everything is done to make Camels the best cigarette it's possible to buy. Nothing is done simply for show.

Take the Camel package for instance. It's the most perfect packing science can devise to protect cigarettes and keep them fresh. Heavy paper—secure foil wrapping—revenue stamp to seal the fold and make the package air-tight. But there's nothing flashy about it. You'll find no extra wrappers. No frills or furbelows.

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And remember—you must pay their extra cost or get lowered quality.

If you want the smoothest, mellowest, mildest cigarette you can imagine—and one entirely free from cigaretty aftertaste,

It's Camels for you.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Returning home after a day's shooting, Dyck Calhoun, gifted young Irish gentleman of the time of the French and American revolution, meets Sheila Llyn, seventeen-year-old girl visiting in the neighborhood. They are mutually attracted. Sheila never knew her dissipated father, Erris Boyne, her mother having divorced him and resumed her maiden name.

CHAPTER II.—Reaching home, Dyck finds Lieutenant Mallow, son of Lord Mallow, with a message from the attorney general summoning Miles Calhoun, Dyck's father, to Dublin.

CHAPTER III.—They go to Dublin and there Mallow quarrels with Dyck and a duel is arranged. They fight with swords and Dyck is victor.

CHAPTER IV.—Erris Boyne, secretly in French employ, gets Dyck drunk and tries to persuade him to join in revolt against England. They quarrel and Dyck is overheard to threaten Boyne. While the former is overcome with drugged wine, Boyne's second wife enters the room and stabs her faithless husband to the heart.

CHAPTER V.—Hours later the room is entered and Dyck arrested on a charge of murder. He does not know if he killed Boyne or not, he was so muddled with the drugged wine.

CHAPTER VI.—Sheila begs her mother to go to Dublin with her to help Dyck. Mrs. Llyn opposes the idea. A letter from Mrs. Llyn's wealthy brother in America invites them to come and live with him and they decide to go.

CHAPTER VII.—Dyck refuses to enter any plea to the charge of murder except "No Defense." He might have escaped by revealing Boyne's treachery but refuses to do so, on Sheila's account. He is sent to prison for eight years. Sheila writes Dyck, assuring him of her belief in his innocence and urging him to come to America after his prison term.

CHAPTER VIII.—Released after serving five years, Dyck is welcomed to freedom by his servant, Michael Clones, and a faithful friend, Christopher Doran. Those two are all who care to remember him. His prospects are destitute, his future bleak and his estate swallowed by creditors.

CHAPTER IX.—In London, almost penniless, Dyck receives a letter from Sheila inviting him to come to America and sending money for the voyage. He feels he cannot in honor go to her.

At a street corner, by a chemist's shop where a red light burned, Dyck opened and read the letter. This is what Sheila had written to him:

"My Dear Friend:

"The time is near (I understand by a free letter to my mother from an official) when you will be freed from prison and will face the world again. I have not written you since your trial, but I have never forgotten and never shall. I have been forbidden to write to you or think of you, but I will take my own way about you. I have known all that has happened since we left Ireland, through the letters my mother has received. I know that Blaymore has been sold, and I am sorry.

"Now that your day of release is near, and you are to be again a free man, have you decided about your future? Is it to be in Ireland? No, I think not. Ireland is no place for a sane and level man to fight his fight for honor, fame and name. I hear that things are worse there in every way than they have been in our lifetime.

"After what has happened in any case, it is not a child that offers you a chance. Listen to me. Ireland and England are not the only places in the world. My uncle came here to Virginia a poor man. He is now immensely rich. He had little to begin with, but he was young like you—indeed, a little older than you—when he first came. He invested wisely, worked bravely, and his wealth grew fast. No man needs a fortune to start the business of life in this country. He can get plenty of land for almost nothing he can get credit for planting and furnishing it, and, if he has friends, they are likely to be.

"All [illegible] you is ready for the asking if you think it over, and meanwhile we know there has been raised in the firm in Dublin money enough to [illegible] you here with comfort. You must not refuse it. Take it as a loan if [illegible] I know you will not take it as a gift.

"I do not know the story of the killing as it was told in court. Well, some one did kill the man, but not you, and it will come out in time. It may well come to the out of the courts of heaven and say if it there it was decreed you were a rogue. I should say heaven was no place for me. No, of one thing I am sure—you never [illegible] an undeserved man. Wayward, [illegible] reckless, disregard you may have been, but you were never dishonest—never!

"When you are free, lift up your shoulders to all the threats of time, then go straight to the old firm where [illegible] will take care and [illegible] you. If you let me know you are coming I will be there to meet you. I am [illegible] to make you [illegible] to [illegible] for you. [illegible]

"[illegible] for the Virginia [illegible] the new life here [illegible] Have no fear [illegible] that has thus far helped you will guide you to the end.

"I write without my mother's permission, but my uncle knows, and though he does not approve, he does not condemn.

"Once more good-by, my dear friend, and God be with you.

"SHEILA LLYN.

"P. S.—I wonder where you will read this letter. I hope it will find you before your release. Please remember that she who writes it summons you from the darkness where you are, to light and freedom here."

Slowly Dyck folded up the letter, when he had read it, and put it in his pocket. Then he turned with pale face and gaunt look to Michael Clones.

"Michael," said he, "that letter is from a lady. It comes from her new home in Virginia."

Michael nodded.

"Aye, aye, sir, I understand you," he said. "Then she doesn't know the truth about her father?"

Dyck sighed heavily.

"No, Michael, she doesn't know the truth."

"I don't believe it would make any difference to her if she did know."

"It would make all the difference to me, Michael. She says she wishes to help me. She tells me that money's been sent to the big firm in Dublin—money to take me across the sea to Virginia."

Michael's face clouded.

"Yes, sir. To Virginia—and what then?"

"Michael, we haven't a penny in the world, you and I, but if I took one farthing of that money I should hope you would kill me. I'm hungry; we've had nothing to eat since yesterday; but if I could put my hands upon that money here and now I wouldn't touch it. Michael, it looks as if we shall have to take to the trade of the footpad."

CHAPTER X.

The Hour Before the Mutiny.

"How did it happen, Michael?"

As he spoke, Dyck looked round the forecastle of the Ariadne with a restless and inquisitive expression.

Michael was seated a few feet away, his head bent forward, his hands clasped around his knees.

"Well, it don't matter one way or another," he replied; "but it was like

"How Did it Happen, Michael?"

this: The night you got a letter from Virginia we was penniless; so at last I went with my watch to the pawnbroker's. You said you'd wait till I got back, though you knew not where I was goin'. When I got back, you were still broodin'. You were seated on a horseblock by the chemist's lamp where you had read the letter. It's not for me to say of what you were thinkin'; but I could guess. You'd been struck hard, and there had come to you a letter from one who meant more to you than all the rest of the world; and you wouldn't answer it because things weren't right. As I stood lookin' at you, wonderin' what to do, though I had twelve shillin's in my pocket from the watch I'd pawned, there came four men, and I knew from their looks they were recruitin' officers of the navy. I saw what was in their eyes. They knew—as why shouldn't they, when they saw a gentleman like you in peasant clothes?—that luck had been agin' us.

"What the end would have been I don't know. It was you that solved the problem, not them. You looked at the first man of them hard. Then you got to your feet.

"'Michael,' says you quietly, 'I'm going to sea. England's at war, and there's work to do. So let's make for a king's ship, and have done with misery and poverty.'

"Then you waved a hand to the man in command of the recruitin' gang, and presently stepped up to him and his friends.

"'Sir,' I said to you, 'I'm not going to be pressed into the navy.'

"'There's no pressin', Michael,' you answered. 'We'll be quota men. We'll do it for cash—for forty pounds each, and no other. You let them have you as you are. But if you don't want to come,' you added, 'it's all the same to me.'

"Faith, I knew that was only talk. I knew you wanted me. Also I knew the king's navy needed me, for men are hard to get. So, when they'd paid us the cash—forty pounds apiece—I stepped in behind you, and here we are—here we are! Forty pounds apiece—equal to three years' wages of an ordinary recruit of the army. It ain't bad, but we're here for three years, and no escape from it. Yes, here we are!"

Dyck laughed.

"Aye, here we're likely to remain, Michael. There's only this to be said—we'll be fighting the French soon, and it's easy to die in the midst of a great fight. If we don't die, Michael, something else will turn up, maybe."

"That's true, sir! They'll make an officer of you, among the common herd. It's the dregs o' the world that comes to the ship's bottom in time of peace or war."

"Well, I'm the dregs of the world, Michael. I'm the supreme dregs."

Somehow the letter from Virginia had decided Dyck Calhoun's fate for him. Here he was—at sea, a common sailor in the navy. He and Michael Clones had eaten and drunk as sailors do, and they had realized that, as they ate and drank on the River Thames, they would not eat and drink on the watery fairway. They had seen the tank foul with age, from which water was drawn for men who could not live without it, and the smell of it had revolted Dyck's senses. They had seen the kegs of pickled meat, and they had been told of the evil rations given to the sailors at sea.

The Ariadne had been a flagship in her day, the home of an admiral and his staff. She carried seventy-four guns, was easily obedient to her swift sail, and had a reputation for gallantry. From the first hour on board, Dyck Calhoun had fitted in; with a discerning eye he had understood the seamen's needs and the weaknesses of the system.

The months he had spent between his exit from prison and his entrance into the Ariadne had roughened, though not coarsened, Dyck's outward appearance. From his first appearance among the seamen he had set himself to become their leader. His enlistment was for three years, and he meant that these three should prove the final success of this naval enterprise, or the stark period in a calendar of tragedy.

The life of the sailor, with its coarseness and drudgery, its inadequate pay, its evil-smelling food, its maggoty bread, its beer drawn from casks that once had held oil or fish, its sinking salt-meat barrels, the hideous stench of the bilge-water—all this could in one sense be no worse than his sufferings in jail. In spite of self-control, jail had been to him the degredation of his hopes, the humiliation of his manhood. He had suffered cold, dampness, fever, and indigestion there, and it had sapped the fresh fiber of life in him.

From the moment Dyck arrived on board the Ariadne he was a marked man. Ferens, a disfranchised solicitor, who knew his story, spread the unwholesome truth about him among the ship's people, and he received attentions at once offensive and flattering. The best educated of the ship's hands approached him on the grievances with which the whole navy was stirring.

Something had put a new spirit into the life of his majesty's ships; it was, in a sense, the reflection of the French Revolution and Tom Paine's "Age of Reason." What the Americans had done in establishing a republic, what France was doing by her revolution, got into the veins and minds of some men in England, but it got into the veins and minds of the sailor first; for, however low his origin, he had intercourse not given to the average landsman. He visited foreign ports, he came in touch with other elements than those of British life and character.

Of all the ships in the navy the Ariadne was the best that Dyck Calhoun could have entered. Her officers were humane and friendly, yet firm; and it was quite certain that if mutiny came they would be treated well. The agitation on the Ariadne in support of the grievances of the sailors was so moderate, that, from the first, Dyck threw in his lot with it. Ferens, the former solicitor, first came to him with a list of proposals, which only repeated the demands made by the agitators at Spithead.

"You're new among us," said Ferens to Dyck. "You don't quite know what we've been doing, I suppose. Some of us have been in the navy for two years, and some for ten. There are men on this ship who could tell you stories that would make your blood run cold—take my word for it. There's a lot of things goin' on that oughtn't to be goin' on. The time has come for reform.

"Things are movin', and we've got to take our stand now when the time is ripe for it, or else lose it forever. Over at Spithead they're gettin' their own way. The government are goin' to send the admiralty board down here, because our admiral says to them that it won't be safe goin' unless they do."

"And what are we going to do here?" asked Dyck. "What's the game of the fleet at the Nore?"

Ferens replied in a low voice:

"Our men are goin' to send out petitions—to the admiralty and to the house of commons."

"Why don't you try Lord Howe?"

"He's not in command of a fleet now. Besides, petitions have been sent him, and he's taken no notice."

"Howe? No notice—the best admiral we ever had! I don't believe it," declared Dyck savagely. "Why, the whole navy believes in Howe. They haven't forgotten what he did in '94. He's as near to the seaman as the seaman is to his mother. He's a big enough friend of the sailor to waste no time before doing his turn."

Ferens shook his head morosely.

"That may be," he said, "but the petitions were sent weeks ago, and there's no sign from Lord Howe. He was at Bath for gout. My idea is he referred them to the admiral commanding at Portsmouth, and was told that behind the whole thing is conspiracy—French socialism and English politics. I give you my word there's no French agent in the fleet, and if there were, it wouldn't have any effect. Our men's grievances are not new. They're as old as Cromwell."

Suddenly a light of suspicion flashed into Ferens' face.

"You're with us, aren't you? You see the wrongs we've suffered, and how bad it all is! Yet you haven't been on a voyage with us. You've only tasted the life in harbor. Good God, this life is heaven to what we have at sea! We don't mind the fightin'. We'd rather fight than eat."

An evil grin covered his face for a minute. "Yes, we'd rather fight than eat, for the stuff we get to eat is hell's broil, God knows! Did you ever think what the life of the sailor is, that swings at the top of a mast with the frost freezin' his very soul, and because he's slow, owin' to the cold, gets twenty lashes for not bein' quicker? Well, I've seen that, and a bad sight it is. Did you ever see a man flogged? It ain't a pretty sight. First, the back takes the click of the whip like a d—d washboard, and you see the ridges rise and go purple and red, and the man has his breath knocked clean out of him with every blow. Nearly every stroke takes off the skin and draws the blood, and a dozen will make the back a ditch of murder. Then the whipper steps, looks at the lashes, feels them tender like, and out and down it comes again. When all the back is ridged and scarred, the flesh, that looked clean and beautiful, becomes a bloody mass. Some men get a hundred lashes, and that's torture and death.

PROPAGANDISTS IN RUSSIA ANNOUNCE LARGE CONTRACTS

FALSE REPORTS OF GIGANTIC SALES NEGOTIATED WITH FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS IS CIRCULATED THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY

Berlin—Russian trade has become a sort of will-o-the-wisp to European newspaper men and American newspaper correspondents in the European capitals. Scarcely a day passes that some Bolshevist agent does not announce a gigantic contract entered into by the Russian government with some great concern, usually a German or English corporation.

If all the locomotives and cars which Russia has been reported to have contracted for in the last year were delivered the former empire would require additional trackage to accommodate them.

Must Pay in Advance

At one time an announcement was made that 10,000 locomotives were contracted for in Germany alone. When the report was run to ground it was learned that an actual deposit had been made on a contract for 100 locomotives, and it cannot be learned that any of these have been delivered as yet.

Bolshevist agents also announced a contract for 10,000 tractors had been made with an American automobile factory. The owner of this factory advised the Soviet agents that delivery of the tractors would begin as soon as Bolshevist agents had Soviet gold turned into Swedish coin and deposited in a Stockholm bank. The gold was not forthcoming. The tractors were not shipped, but the Soviet propagandists failed to herald that fact as widely as they did the signing of the contract.

One American concern which shipped 30 tractors to Reval without having any deposit on them still has the tractors in storage in Esthonia and there is no indication that the Soviet officials will fulfill their agreement to take them.

Cool Towards U. S. Firms

Since the commercial agreements were framed by the Bolsheviki with Germany and Great Britain there has been a noticeable cooling of the Bolshevist foreign representatives toward America. For the moment they pretend to be extremely indifferent as to whether they establish closer trade relations with America. But this is apparently not giving any uneasiness to Americans who have actually been in contact with Bolshevist agents and have tried to close contracts on a strictly business basis.

Contracts Good on "Paper"

A Danish exporter and importer, who is representing many American firms in their efforts to get actual contracts with Soviet government, backed by substantial cash advances, told the correspondent: "I am done chasing after this threatened Bolshevist business. There have been some contracts closed. I know a few men who have sold the Bolsheviki stuff which they actually had to have. I know men who have made a lot of money out of their business. But I know a lot more who have signed up wonderful paper contracts that never came to anything. That has been my experience. I have been able to get wonderful promises, but I couldn't get any gold, and I didn't want to have a lot of stuff stacked up in storage at Reval as many men have who have sent shipments into the Baltic without advance payments sufficient to insure the delivery and final payment."

Germans Not Enthusiastic

German business men are apparently not enthusiastic about Russian business on the terms which the Bolshevist agents offer, and there is no disposition to execute wholesale contracts without something more definite in the way of payment than Soviet signatures. German papers continue to be skeptical about the possibility of trade with Soviet Russia, especially since the Soviet government has refused to grant admission to many German business representatives who have sought to make an investigation of economic conditions there.

Recently a number of German fur dealers and leather merchants asked permission to visit Russia, but were denied vises. This caused much comment in commercial circles. The Soviet government said it would admit these men if the government desired to send them as official trade experts, but would not allow them to enter as representatives of commercial concerns. Small shipments of sample hides and furs were made by the Soviet government from Moscow to Leipsig, with the explanation that these samples would make it possible for German merchants to make contracts in Germany for Russian furs.

Transportation Poor

The Soviet government's refusal to admit William F. Johnston, the president of the American International Machinists, has also been much commented on by the German press, which expresses surprise as Johnston had been an earnest advocate of trade relations between America and Russia.

With Russia's transportation so badly down that there is little hope of moving large quantities of heavy freight, and with the Russian gold reserve down to a point believed to be under $200,000,000, practical German business men generally discount the idea that a speedy resumption of business on a large scale is possible, even if the Soviet republic abandons its monopolization of trade and makes it possible for individual initiative to have play.

ST. LOUIS PLANS JUNIOR POLICE DEPARTMENT

St. Louis—St. Louis plans a junior police department, composed of boys between 12 and 18 years old, to stem crime among juveniles as a crime prevention measure. Victor J. Miller, president of the Board of Commissioners, is sponsor of the movement.

Permanent positions with pay are planned for some of the boys who would wear uniforms and badges, Miller said. Juniors would not have power to make arrests, but would operate with the city police and report cases of juveniles who are straying from the right path, he added.

Organization of the department will get under way as soon as plans are fully worked out, he reported. It is intended to graduate juniors to the senior force.

"Crime prevention is the object of the organization," the head of the local police continued. "If we can teach the boys to respect and uphold the laws, we will save scores of them from following paths that lead to the penitentiaries.

"The strongholds of the department should be in the tenement districts. It is largely from these sections that criminals come. There is where youngsters often learn the rudiments of crime."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Returning home after a day's shooting, Dyck Calhoun, gifted young Irish gentleman of the time of the French and American revolution, meets Sheila Llyn, seventeen-year-old girl visiting in the neighborhood. They are mutually attracted. Sheila never knew her dissipated father, Erris Boyne, her mother having divorced him and resumed her maiden name.

CHAPTER II.—Reaching home, Dyck finds Lieut. Mallow, son of Lord Mallow, with a message from the attorney general summoning Miles Calhoun, Dyck's father, to Dublin.

CHAPTER III.—They go to Dublin and there Mallow quarrels with Dyck and a duel is arranged. They fight with swords and Dyck is victor.

CHAPTER IV.—Erris Boyne, secretly in French employ, gets Dyck drunk and tries to persuade him to join in revolt against England. They quarrel and Dyck is overheard to threaten Boyne. While the former is overcome with drugged wine, Boyne's second wife enters the room and stabs her faithless husband to the heart.

CHAPTER V.—Hours later the room is entered and Dyck arrested on a charge of murder. He does not know if he killed Boyne or not, he was so muddled with the drugged wine.

CHAPTER VI.—Sheila begs her mother to go to Dublin with her to help Dyck. Mrs. Llyn opposes the idea. A letter from Mrs. Llyn's wealthy brother in America invites them to come and live with him, and they decide to go.

CHAPTER VII.—Dyck refuses to enter any plea to the charge of murder except "No Defense." He might have escaped by revealing Boyne's treachery but refuses to do so, on Sheila's account. He is sent to prison for eight years. Sheila writes Dyck, assuring him of her belief in his innocence and urging him to come to America after his prison term.

CHAPTER VIII.—Released after serving four years, Dyck is welcomed to freedom by his servant, Michael Clones, and a faithful friend, Christopher Dogan. Those two are all who care to remember him. He is practically destitute, his father dead and his estate swallowed by creditors.

CHAPTER IX.—In London, almost penniless, Dyck receives a letter from Sheila inviting him to come to America and sending money for the voyage. He feels he cannot in honor go to her.

At a street corner, by a chemist's shop where a red light burned, Dyck opened and read the letter. This is what Sheila had written to him:

"My Dear Friend:

"The time is near (I understand by a late letter to my mother from an official) when you will be freed from prison and will face the world again. I have not written you since your trial, but I have never forgotten and never shall. I have been forbidden to write to you or think of you, but I will take my own way about you. I have known all that has happened since we left Ireland, through the letters my mother has received. I know that Playmore has been sold, and I am sorry.

"Now that your day of release is near, and you are to be again a free man, have you decided about your future? Is it to be in Ireland? No, I think not. Ireland is no place for a sane and level man to fight his fight for honor, fame and name. I hear that things are worse there in every way than they have been in our lifetime.

"After what has happened in any case, it is not a field that offers you a chance. Listen to me. Ireland and England are not the only places in the world. My uncle came here to Virginia a poor man. He is now immensely rich. He had little to begin with, but he was young like you—indeed, a little older than you—when he first came. He invested wisely, worked bravely, and his wealth grew fast. No man needs a fortune to start the business of life in this country. He can get plenty of land for almost nothing; he can get credit for planting and furnishing his land, and, if he has friends, the credit is sure.

"All America is ready for 'the likes of you.' Think it over, and meanwhile please know there has been placed with the firm in Dublin money enough to bring you here with comfort. You must not refuse it. Take it as a loan, for I know you will not take it as a gift.

"I do not know the story of the killing, even as it was told in court. Well, some one killed the man, but not you, and the truth will come out in time. If one should come to me out of the courts of heaven and say that there it was declared you were a rogue, I should say heaven was no place for me. No, of one thing I am sure—you never killed an undefended man. Wayward, wanton, reckless, dissipated you may have been, but you were never depraved—never!

"When you are free, lift up your shoulders to all the threats of time, then go straight to the old firm where the money is, draw it, take ship and come here. If you let me know you are coming, I will be there to meet you when you step ashore, to give you a firm hand-clasp to tell you that in this land there is a good place for you, if you will win it.

"If you take ship for the Virginia coast, enter upon the new life here with faith and courage. Have no fear. Heaven that has thus far helped you will guide you to the end.

"I write without my mother's permission, but my uncle knows, and though he does not approve, he does not condemn.

"Once more good-by, my dear friend, and God be with you.

"SHEILA LLYN.

"P. S.—I wonder where you will read this letter. I hope it will find you before your release. Please remember that she who writes it summons you from the darkness where you are, to light and freedom here."

Slowly Dyck folded up the letter, when he had read it, and put it in his pocket. Then he turned with pale face and gaunt look to Michael Clones.

"Michael," said he, "that letter is from a lady. It comes from her new home in Virginia."

Michael nodded.

"Aye, aye, sir, I understand you," he said. "Then she doesn't know the truth about her father?"

Dyck sighed heavily.

"No, Michael, she doesn't know the truth."

"I don't believe it would make any difference to her if she did know."

"It would make all the difference to me, Michael. She says she wishes to help me. She tells me that money's been sent to the big firm in Dublin—money to take me across the sea to Virginia."

Michael's face clouded.

"Yes, sir. To Virginia—and what then?"

"Michael, we haven't a penny in the world, you and I, but if I took one farthing of that money I should hope you would kill me. I'm hungry; we've had nothing to eat since yesterday; but if I could put my hands upon that money here and now I wouldn't touch it. Michael, it looks as if we shall have to take to the trade of the footpad."

CHAPTER X.

The Hour Before the Mutiny.

"How did it happen, Michael?"

As he spoke, Dyck looked round the forecastle of the Arhdne with a restless and inquisitive expression.

Michael was seated a few feet away, his head bent forward, his hands clasped around his knees.

"Well, it don't matter one way or 'nother," he replied; "but it was like

"How Did it Happen, Michael?"

this: The night you got a letter from Virginia we was penniless; so at last I went with my watch to the pawnbroker's. You said you'd wait till I got back, though you knew not where I was goin'. When I got back, you were still broodin'. You were seated on a horseblock by the chemist's lamp where you had read the letter. It's not for me to say of what you were thinkin'; but I could guess. You'd been struck hard, and there had come to you a letter from one who meant more to you than all the rest of the world; and you wouldn't answer it because things weren't right. As I stood lookin' at you, wonderin' what to do, though I had twelve shillin's in my pocket from the watch I'd pawned, there came four men, and I knew from their looks they were recruitin' officers of the navy. I saw what was in their eyes. They knew—as why shouldn't they, when they saw a gentleman like you in peasant clothes?—that luck had beenag'in' us.

"What the end would have been I don't know. It was you that solved the problem, not them. You looked at the first man of them hard. Then you got to your feet.

"'Michael,' says you quietly, 'I'm going to sea. England's at war, and there's work to do. So let's make for a king's ship, and have done with misery and poverty.'

"Then you waved a hand to the man in command of the recruitin' gang, and presently stepped up to him and his friends.

"'Sir,' I said to you, 'I'm not going to be pressed into the navy.'

"'There's no pressin', Michael,' you answered. 'We'll be quota men. We'll do it for cash—for forty pounds each, and no other. You let them have you as you are. But if you don't want to come,' you added, 'it's all the same to me.'

"Faith, I knew that was only talk. I knew you wanted me. Also I knew the king's navy needed me, for men are hard to get. So, when they'd paid us the cash—forty pounds apiece—I stepped in behind you, and here we are—here we are! Forty pounds apiece—equal to three years' wages of an ordinary recruit of the army. It ain't bad, but we're here for three years, and no escape from it. Yes, here we are!"

Dyck laughed.

"Aye, here we're likely to remain, Michael. There's only this to be said—we'll be fighting the French soon, and it's easy to die in the midst of a great fight. If we don't die, Michael, something else will turn up, maybe."

"That's true, sir! They'll make an officer of you, among the common herd. It's the dregs o' the world that comes to the ship's bottom in time of peace or war."

"Well, I'm the dregs of the world, Michael. I'm the supreme dregs."

Somehow the letter from Virginia had decided Dyck Calhoun's fate for him. Here he was—at sea, a common sailor in the navy. He and Michael Clones had eaten and drunk as sailors do, and they had realized that, as they ate and drank on the River Thames, they would not eat and drink on the watery fairway. They had seen the tank foul with age, from which water was drawn for men who could not live without it, and the smell of it had revolted Dyck's senses. They had seen the kegs of pickled meat, and they had been told of the evil rations given to the sailors at sea.

The Ariadne had been a flagship in her day, the home of an admiral and his staff. She carried seventy-four guns, was easily obedient to her swift sail, and had a reputation for gallantry. From the first hour on board, Dyck Calhoun had fitted in; with a discerning eye he had understood the seamen's needs and the weaknesses of the system.

The months he had spent between his exit from prison and his entrance into the Ariadne had roughened, though not coarsened, Dyck's outward appearance. From his first appearance among the seamen he had set himself to become their leader. His enlistment was for three years, and he meant that these three should prove the final success of this naval enterprise, or the stark period in a calendar of tragedy.

The life of the sailor, with its coarseness and drudgery, its inadequate pay, its evil-smelling food, its maggoty bread, its beer drawn from casks that once had held oil or fish, its stinking salt-meat barrels, the hideous stench of the bilge-water—all this could in one sense be no worse than his sufferings in jail. In spite of self-control, jail had been to him the degradation of his hopes, the humiliation of his manhood. He had suffered cold, dampness, fever, and indigestion there, and it had sapped the fresh fiber of life in him.

From the moment Dyck arrived on board the Ariadne he was a marked man. Ferens, a disfranchised solicitor, who knew his story, spread the unwholesome truth about him among the ship's people, and he received attentions at once offensive and flattering. The best educated of the ship's hands approached him on the grievances with which the whole navy was stirring.

Something had put a new spirit into the life of his majesty's ships; it was, in a sense, the reflection of the French Revolution and Tom Paine's "Age of Reason." What the Americans had done in establishing a republic, what France was doing by her revolution, got into the veins and minds of some men in England, but it got into the veins and minds of the sailor first; for, however low his origin, he had intercourse not given to the average landsman. He visited foreign ports, he came in touch with other elements than those of British life and character.

Of all the ships in the navy the Ariadne was the best that Dyck Calhoun could have entered. Her officers were humane and friendly, yet firm; and it was quite certain that if mutiny came they would be treated well. The agitation on the Ariadne in support of the grievances of the sailors was so moderate, that, from the first, Dyck threw in his lot with it. Ferens, the former solicitor, first came to him with a list of proposals, which only repeated the demands made by the agitators at Spithead.

"You're new among us," said Ferens to Dyck. "You don't quite know what we're been doing, I suppose. Some of us have been in the navy for two years, and some for ten. There are men on this ship who could tell you stories that would make your blood run cold—take my word for it. There's a lot of things goin' on that oughtn't to be goin' on. The time has come for reform.

"'Things are movin', and we've got to take our stand now when the time is ripe for it, or else lose it forever. Over at Spithead they're gettin' their own way. The government are goin' to send the admiralty board down here, because our admiral says to them that it won't be safe goin' unless they do."

"And what are we going to do here?" asked Dyck. "What's the game of the fleet at the Nore?"

Ferens replied in a low voice:

"Our men are goin' to send out petitions—to the admiralty and to the house of commons."

"Why don't you try Lord Howe?"

"He's not in command of a fleet now. Besides, petitions have been sent him, and he's taken no notice."

"Howe? No notice—the best admiral we ever had! I don't believe it," declared Dyck savagely. "Why, the whole navy believes in Howe. They haven't forgotten what he did in '94. He's as near to the seaman as the seaman is to his mother. He's a big enough friend of the sailor to waste no time before doing his turn."

Ferens shook his head morosely.

"That may be," he said, "but the petitions were sent weeks ago, and there's no sign from Lord Howe. He was at Bath for gout. My idea is he referred them to the admiral commanding at Portsmouth, and was told that behind the whole thing is conspiracy—French socialism and English politics. I give you my word there's no French agent in the fleet, and if there were, it wouldn't have any effect. Our men's grievances are not new. They're as old as Cromwell."

Suddenly a light of suspicion flashed into Ferens' face.

"You're with us, aren't you? You see the wrongs we've suffered, and how bad it all is! Yet you haven't been on a voyage with us. You've only tasted the life in harbor. Good God, this life is heaven to what we have at sea! We don't mind the fightin'. We'd rather fight than eat." An evil grin covered his face for a minute. "Yes, we'd rather fight than eat, for the stuff we get to eat is hell's broth, God knows! Did you ever think what the life of the sailor is, that swings at the top of a mast with the frost freezin' his very soul, and because he's slow, owin' to the cold, gets twenty lashes for not hein' quicker? Well, I've seen that, and a bad sight it is. Did you ever see a man flogged? It ain't a pretty sight. First, the back takes the click of the whip like a d—d washboard, and you see the ridges rise and go purple and red, and the man has his breath knocked clean out of him with every blow. Nearly every stroke takes off the skin and draws the blood, and a dozen will make the back a ditch of murder. Then the whipper stops, looks at the lashes, feels them tender like, and out and down it comes again. When all the back is ridged and scarred, the flesh, that looked clean and beautiful, becomes a bloody mass. Some men get a hundred lashes, and that's torture and death.

PROPAGANDISTS IN RUSSIA ANNOUNCE LARGE CONTRACTS

FALSE REPORTS OF GIGANTIC SALES NEGOTIATED WITH FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS IS CIRCULATED THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY

Berlin—Russian trade has become a sort of will-o'-the-wisp to European newspaper men and American newspaper correspondents in the European capitals. Scarcely a day passes that some Bolshevist agent does not announce a gigantic contract entered into by the Russian government with some great concern, usually a German or English corporation.

If all the locomotives and cars which Russia has been reported to have contracted for in the last year were delivered the former empire would require additional trackage to accommodate them.

Must Pay in Advance

At one time an announcement was made that 10,000 locomotives were contracted for in Germany alone. When the report was run to ground it was learned that an actual deposit had been made on a contract for 100 locomotives, and it cannot be learned that any of these have been delivered as yet.

Bolshevist agents also announced a contract for 10,000 tractors had been made with an American automobile factory. The owner of this factory advised the Soviet agents that delivery of the tractors would begin as soon as Bolshevist agents had Soviet gold turned into Swedish coin and deposited in a Stockholm bank. The gold was not forthcoming. The tractors were not shipped, but the Soviet propagandists failed to herald that fact as widely as they did the signing of the contract.

One American concern which shipped 30 tractors to Reval without having any deposit on them still has the tractors in storage in Esthonia and there is no indication that the Soviet officials will fulfill their agreement to take them.

Cool Towards U. S. Firms

Since the commercial agreements were framed by the Bolsheviki with Germany and Great Britain there has been a noticeable cooling of the Bolshevist foreign representatives toward America. For the moment they pretend to be extremely indifferent as to whether they establish closer trade relations with America. But this is apparently not giving any uneasiness to Americans who have actually been in contact with Bolshevist agents and have tried to close contracts on a strictly business basis.

Contracts Good on "Paper"

A Danish exporter and importer, who is representing many American firms in their efforts to get actual contracts with Soviet government, backed by substantial cash advances, told the correspondent: "I am done chasing after this threatened Bolshevist business. There have been some contracts closed. I know a few men who have sold the Bolsheviki stuff which they actually had to have. I know men who have made a lot of money out of their business. But I know a lot more who have signed up wonderful paper contracts that never came to anything. That has been my experience. I have been able to get wonderful promises, but I couldn't get any gold, and I didn't want to have a lot of stuff stacked up in storage at Reval as many men have who have sent shipments into the Baltic without advance payments sufficient to insure the delivery and final payment."

Germans Not Enthusiastic

German business men are apparently not enthusiastic about Russian business on the terms which the Bolshevist agents offer, and there is no disposition to execute wholesale contracts without something more definite in the way of payment than Soviet signatures. German papers continue to be skeptical about the possibility of trade with Soviet Russia, especially since the Soviet government has refused to grant admission to many German business representatives who have sought to make an investigation of economic conditions there.

Recently a number of German fur dealers and leather merchants asked permission to visit Russia, but were denied vises. This caused much comment in commercial circles. The Soviet government said it would admit these men if the government desired to send them as official trade experts, but would not allow them to enter as representatives of commercial concerns. Small shipments of sample hides and furs were made by the Soviet government from Moscow to Leipsig, with the explanation that these samples would make it possible for German merchants to make contracts in Germany for Russian furs.

Transportation Poor

The Soviet government's refusal to admit William F. Johnston, the president of the American International Machinists, has also been much commented on by the German press, which expresses surprise as Johnston had been an earnest advocate of trade relations between America and Russia.

With Russia's transportation so badly down that there is little hope of moving large quantities of heavy freight, and with the Russian gold reserve down to a point believed to be under $200,000,000, practical German business men generally discount the idea that a speedy resumption of business on a large scale is possible, even if the Soviet republic abandons its monopolization of trade and makes it possible for individual initiative to have play.

NOVEL HOSPITAL IS FOSTERED BY A CHICAGO PAPER

FRESH AIR FUND SANITARIUM FOR CHICAGO BABIES AND THEIR MOTHERS IS FATHERED BY CHICAGO NEWS.

Chicago, July 12.—One of the most unusual charity institutions of the country, The Chicago Daily News Air Fund sanitarium for sick babies, has just opened its thirty-fifth season in a new $271,000 fire-proof building on an island here in Lincoln Park. In its previous wooden plant in the park, the sanitarium cared for more than 70,000 sick babies, received more than 840,000 mothers and older brothers and sisters, and passed through more than double this number of visitors.

Everything Free

Everything at the sanitarium is free, including medication for children and for mothers, if it is required. The patients are treated at the sanitarium during the day and if further medication is needed, the mother is given medicines to take home.

The institution is operated weeks of the year, during the summer school vacation period, and open daily except Sunday from a m. until 5 p. m.

It is a hope of the comptroller the sanitarium's Fresh Air Fund that with its new plant the season may be extended until events cases can be taken the year around under day and night staffs and at the hospital until cured.

The principal feature of the sanitarium is its fresh air pavilion only a step or two from lake Michigan. This has a great expanse floor, 300 feet long and more than 100 feet wide, where swing 200 babies lake breezes blow. The hospital section adjoining is thoroughly equipped. It takes care also of eczema cases in the park.

The staff of the Fresh Air Fund sanitarium this year, under the direction of Dr. Rhoda Pike Barstow, includes five resident doctors, four graduate nurses, four undergraduate nurses and eight others who handle registration, etc. Twelve of Chicago's leading baby specialists also contribute much of their time without charge.

The charity fund which maintains the institution is supported by the Chicago Daily News and by contributions ranging from 10 cents upwards from over the city and country also from beyond this state.

ST. LOUIS PLANS JUNIOR POLICE DEPARTMENT

St. Louis—St. Louis plans a junior police department, composed of boys between 12 and 18 years old, to stem among juveniles as a crime preventive measure. Victor J. Miller, president of the Board of Commissioners, is sponsor of the movement.

Permanent positions with pay are planned for some of the boys. They would wear uniforms and badges, Miller said. Juniors would not have power to make arrests, but would operate with the city police and report cases of juveniles who are straying from the right path, he added.

Organization of the department will get under way as soon as plans are fully worked out, he reported. It is intended to graduate juniors to the senior force.

"Crime prevention is the object of the organization," the head of the local police continued. "If we can teach the boys to respect and uphold the laws, we will save scores of them from following paths that lead to the penitentiaries.

"The strongholds of the department should be in the tenement districts. It is largely from these sections that the criminals come. There is where boys often learn the rudiments of crime."

PLAN GIANT TERMINUS FOR WATERWAY PROJECT

Chicago—Plans for a great western terminus of the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway to the sea if built, will be worked out by a joint commission named by Illinois and Indiana. Legislatures of both states have recently appropriated $25,000 each for the purpose.

Estimate of cost and recommendations are also included in the commission's work, which is to be finished for presentation to the 1923 legislatures.

The project, which is called the "Illiana Harbor," calls for a transfer harbor on Lake Michigan to the east of South Chicago. It would lie partly in Illinois and partly in Indiana. Besides such needs of Chicago as were not taken care of by its own harbor facilities, it would provide facilities for the great Calumet manufacturing district bounded on the east by Gary, Ind.

It is proposed to make the harbor a terminus also for the Illinois waterway connecting the Great Lakes with the Gulf. Interchange of freight between barge and rail, barge and ship and ship and rail is contemplated.

PROVES RED POLLED CATTLE ARE PUREBRED

Gotham—Harley A. Martin, secretary of the Red Polled Cattle Club of America, is in the midst of a word battle with certain of the livestock authorities of the country. He has successfully refuted all claims made to the effect that the breed which he represents and which has gained a strong foothold among the farmers of the country is an offshot of the Devon breed.

"The Red Polled cattle are", declared Mr. Martin, "the union of Norfolk and Suffolk cattle of England. They come by nature polled and were bred pure for years before the establishment of the herdbook, making them one of the oldest breeds known to be of pure breeding on an established foundation."

FACULTY HONORS FARMERS

Pullman, Washington—Following the plan initiated in Wisconsin, the faculty of the agricultural college of Washington has just honored three Washington farmers for outstanding achievements in agriculture. This is the first year the college has given formal recognition to agricultural leaders.

The three men honored are F. M. Rothrock, one of the leaders in the livestock industry in the Northwest; A. A. Kelly who has done much for the fruit industry of the Evergreen state, and Alexander Todd who is one of the leading oatgrowers on the Pacific slope.

The plan of honoring agricultural leaders was first started in Wisconsin in 1909. To date Wisconsin has honored two women and 38 men who have made large contributions to the upbuilding of agriculture and rural life.

PLAN GIANT TERMINUS FOR WATERWAY PROJECT

Chicago—Plans for a great western terminus of the proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway to the sea if built, will be worked out by a joint commission named by Illinois and Indiana. Legislatures of both states have recently appropriated $25,000 each for the purpose.

Estimate of cost and recommendations are also included in the commission's work, which is to be finished for presentation to the 1923 legislatures.

The project, which is called the "Illiana Harbor," calls for a transfer harbor on Lake Michigan to the east of South Chicago. It would lie partly in Illinois and partly in Indiana. Besides such needs of Chicago as were not taken care of by its own harbor facilities, it would provide facilities for the great Calumet manufacturing district bounded on the east by Gary, Ind.

It is proposed to make the harbor a terminus also for the Illinois waterway connecting the Great Lakes with the Gulf. Interchange of freight between barge and rail, barge and ship, and ship and rail is contemplated.

PROVES RED POLLED CATTLE ARE PUREBRED

Gotham—Harley A. Martin, secretary of the Red Polled Cattle Club of America, is in the midst of a word battle with certain of the livestock authorities of the country. He has successfully refuted all claims made to the effect that the breed which he represents and which has gained a strong foothold among the farmers of the country is an offshot of the Devon breed.

"The Red Polled cattle are", declared Mr. Martin, "the union of Norfolk and Suffolk cattle of England. They come by nature polled and were bred pure for years before the establishment of the herdbook, making them one of the oldest breeds known to be of pure breeding on an established foundation."

FACULTY HONORS FARMERS

Pullman, Washington—Following the plan initiated in Wisconsin, the faculty of the agricultural college of Washington has just honored three Washington farmers for outstanding achievements in agriculture. This is the first year the college has given formal recognition to agricultural leaders.

The three men honored are F. M. Rothrock, one of the leaders in the livestock industry in the Northwest; A. A. Kelly who has done much for the fruit industry of the Evergreen state, and Alexander Todd who is one of the leading dairymen on the Pacific slope.

The plan of honoring agricultural leaders was first started in Wisconsin in 1909. To date Wisconsin has honored two women and 38 men who have made large contributions to the upbuilding of agriculture and rural life.

Sicily is practically a treeless country.

MAY McAVOY A SENSATION IN HECTOR TURNBULL PHOTOPLAY

Little Film Actress With Pig Power Wins All Hearts in

"A Private Scandal"

Probably nobody who went to the Palace Theatre last evening to witness the opening of Realart's big Birthday Special expected anything but a treat. That was a foregone conclusion, with a Hector Turnbull story, a cast including May McAvoy, Bruce Gordon, Kathlyn Williams, Ralph Lewis and Lloyd Whitlock, and Chester M. Franklyn as director. But the treat turned out to be a veritable sensation, and winsome little May McAvoy has won new laurels. Last chance to see this tonight.

WISCONSIN GRAIN CROPS REDUCED BELOW AVERAGE

ESTIMATE THAT CROPS FELL OFF 13,000,000 BUSHELS DURING MONTH OF JUNE; HEADED TOO QUICKLY

Madison, Wis.—Production of grain crops in Wisconsin was reduced by 13,000,000 bushels during the month of June, according to Joseph A. Becker of the Wisconsin Cooperative Crop Reporting Service. Forecast of grain production, based upon July 1 condition, is estimated at 116,003,000 bushels as compared to 128,869,000 forecast on June 1, and 136,719,000 produced in 1920, and a 5-year average of 123,214,000.

Oats Decline 12 Percent

Oats declined 12 per cent during the month, the crop having headed out at an unusually short straw with a short head and shriveled grain. Condition on July 1 was 83 per cent compared to 95 per cent on June 1, 91 per cent last year and a year average of 92 per cent. Production forecast is 91,081 bushels as compared with 101,827,000 on June 1, 107,966,000 produced in 1920 and a 5-year average of 103,156,000.

Barley production in the United States is estimated at 184 million bushels, compared to 191 million forecasted on June 1 202 million harvested in 1920 and a 5-year average of 208 million.

Rye Fans Well

Rye had begun to head before the drought and consequently suffered less than other grains, the report says. Condition was 88 per cent, compared to 90 per cent on June 1, 91 per cent a year ago, and a 10-year average of 90 per cent. Production is estimated at 7,454,000 bushels, compared to 7,624,000 forecasted on June 1, 7,725,000 produced in 1920 and a 5-year average of 7,561,000 bushels.

For the United States, a production of 69.9 million bushels is forecasted, compared to 71 million on June 1, 69.3 million harvested in 1920 and a 5-year average of 69.2 million.

Total production of wheat in Wisconsin is estimated at 3,772,000 bushels compared to 4,313,000 on June 1, 5,161,000 produced in 1920 and a 5-year average of 6,156,000 bushels.

Wheat on farms is estimated at 10 per cent of the 1920 crop, or 526,000 bushels, compared to 4.3 per cent a year ago, or 316,000 bushels, and a 5-year average of 3.8 per cent.

Condition of spring wheat in Wisconsin declined from 92 percent on June 1, to 76 per cent on July 1, compared to 89 per cent last year and a 10-year average of 90 per cent. Production is now forecasted at 2,280,000 bushels compared to 2,691,000 on June 1, 3,159,000 produced in 1920 and a 5-year average of 4,402,000 bushels.

Winter Wheat Fails

Wisconsin winter wheat declined from 86 per cent on June 1 to 80 per cent on July 1, compared to 90 per cent a year ago and a 10-year average of 87 per cent. William A. Garren Takes Stand On The Big Question

Thinking men and women throughout the state have been asking themselves this question lately:

"If you are feeling tired and worn out; if you suffer from headaches and pains in various parts of the body, should you take dopey drugs to relieve the pain?"

Perhaps you can answer that question. Some day you will have to, unless you are an exception to the general rule. So you might as well think it over now, and prepare for the inevitable.

William A. Garren, the expert you have read about for years, says that these pains are telegraph messages of the body, warning you that your stomach is out of order and that it is playing havoc with your blood and nerves. That's why you feel drowsy, tired and sickly—why your nerves are easily upset. Like every other health expert, Garren says to leave such drugs alone. They only lessen the pain temporarily and leave you in a worse condition than when you took them. They keep you from receiving these telegraph messages, but they don't remove the cause of disease that will soon be gnawing into your stomach, poisoning your blood and undermining your health. And you know what happens if this condition continues.

William A. Garren has perfected a tonic designed to remove both the cause and effect of these symptoms. It is declared by many authorities to be the best preparation in the world for those who suffer from such stomach disorders as constipation and indigestion, and impurities of the Blood. Garren's Tonic is moulded after the famous Garren theory. You would do well to call and ask for more facts concerning this scientific medicine. It has helped thousands. Surely it should help you. Use your telephone to a good advantage by calling for a bottle now—today. You will be delighted tomorrow with the wonderful results after your first few doses. Regain that vigorous feeling you once had. There's always a chance for those who try to help themselves.

Garren's Tonic is sold in Wisconsin Rapids by E. M. Coyle and in Pittsville by Dietz's Drug Store.

WISCONSIN GRAIN CROPS REDUCED BELOW AVERAGE

ESTIMATE THAT CROPS FELL OFF 13,000,000 BUSHELS DURING MONTH OF JUNE; HEADED TOO QUICKLY

Madison, Wis.—Production of grain crops in Wisconsin was reduced by 13,000,000 bushels during the month of June, according to Joseph A. Becker of the Wisconsin Cooperative Crop Reporting Service. Production forecast is 91,081 bushels as compared with 101,825,000 on June 1, 107,906,000 produced in 1920 and a 5-year average of 97,456,000.

Rye Fans Well

Rye had begun to head before the drought and consequently suffered less than other grains, the report says. Condition was 88 per cent, compared to 90 per cent on June 1, 91 per cent a year ago, and a 10-year average of 90 per cent. Production is estimated at 7,451,000 bushels, compared to 7,624,000 forecasted on June 1, 7,728,000 produced in 1920 and a 5-year average of 7,564,000 bushels.

William A. Garren Takes Stand On The Big Question

Thinking men and women throughout the state have been asking themselves this question lately:

"If you are feeling tired and worn out; if you suffer from headaches and pains in various parts of the body, should you take "dopey drugs" to relieve the pain?"

Perhaps you can answer that question. Some day you will have to, unless you are an exception to the general rule. So you might as well think it over now, and prepare for the inevitable.

William A. Garren, the expert you have read about for years, says that these pains are telegraph messages to the body, warning you that your stomach is out of order and that it is playing havoc with your blood and nerves. That's why you feel drowsy, tired and sickly—why your nerves are easily upset. Like every other health expert, Garren says to leave such drugs alone. They only lessen the pain temporarily and leave you in a worse condition than when you took them. They keep you from receiving these telegraph messages, but they don't remove the cause of disease that will soon be gnawing into your stomach, poisoning your blood and undermining your health. And you know what happens if this condition continues.

William A. Garren has perfected a tonic designed to remove both the cause and effect of these symptoms. It is declared by many authorities to be the best preparation in the world for those who suffer from such stomach disorders as constipation and indigestion, and impurities of the Blood. Garren's Tonic is moulded after the famous Garren theory. You would do well to call and ask for more facts concerning this scientific medicine. It has helped thousands, surely it should help you. Use your telephone to a good advantage by calling for a bottle now—today. You will be delighted tomorrow with the wonderful results after your first few doses. Regain that vigorous feeling you once had. There's always a chance for those who try to help themselves.

Garren's Tonic is sold in Wisconsin Rapids by E. M. Coyle and in Pittsville by Dietz's Drug Store.
